Hull Offers Canada Vast Joint Water Development

Channel Would Be 3,000 Miles Long

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of State Hull last night offered to the government of Canada the draft of a proposed treaty for development and planned use of the vast Great Lakes-St. Lawrence River basin.

Crowning many years of discussion and negotiation, the treaty encompasses provision of a deep waterway from the interior of the continent to the ocean, production of great amounts of cheap electric power, opening up of tremendous mineral deposits and restoration and enhancement of the beauties of Niagara, while increasing utilization of hydroelectric power available at the falls.

Involving ultimate expenditure of $540,000,000 or more, and creation of a 27-foot channel for shipping clear from Duluth, Minn., to the Atlantic, some 3,000 miles, the undertaking would provide an additional 2,200,000 horsepower of electricity, it has been estimated, and open a water route for 13,000,000 tons of commerce annually at a shipping cost saving of $97,000,000.

Was First Defeat.

Revival of the project, long a favored one with President Roosevelt, recalls that it was on that issue that he suffered his first major defeat in the Senate, where an earlier treaty, differing in numerous respects from the new one, was rejected on March 14, 1934, by a vote of 46 to 42, with 59 favorable votes needed to provide the required two-thirds. Since that time, however, the membership of the Senate has changed materially, seven of the treaty opponents having been defeated in the 1934 elections alone.

Almost immediate action in getting the program under way would be made possible by the treaty.

Canada Offered Delay.

"The specific proposals are so framed," said the State Department announcement, "that there need be no delay in developing the International Rapids of the St. Lawrence River. Provision is also made assuring completion of the waterway within reasonable time. The United States Government is prepared to finance the works necessary to carry sea-borne commerce past the International Rapids, and to make possible power development from these rapids whenever desired by either country."

Taking cognizance, apparently, of the less intense interest in Canada than exists in this country, provision is made that Canada need not carry out her share of the work until the end of 1949.

In a note of transmittal to Canadian Minister Sir Herbert Marler, Secretary of State Hull wrote that the proposed treaty would:

"Enable the United States to go forward immediately with the international rapids section link in the proposed St. Lawrence deep waterway and the incidental power development;

"Defer Canada's responsibility for completing its share of the waterway for a sufficient time to assure the readiness of the Ontario power market to absorb its share of the power;

"Provide for an international commission to develop plans and advise the two governments in a program to promote the most advantageous use of the entire Great Lakes-St. Lawrence resource;

"Assure the immediate undertaking under the supervision of this commission of the proposed remedial works to preserve the Father Pays $10,000 Ransom for Florida Boy, Hopes for New Contact With Abductors; Citizens Ready to Resume Search at Dawn.

By the Associated Press.

Princeton, Fla., May 31.—Several hundred persons who had assembled here to search for kidnaped James Baily Cash, jr., dispersed tonight upon request of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the parents of the 5-year-old child.

It was feared a demonstration might frighten the abductors into killing the boy they took from his father's apartment house on the Miami-Key West highway Saturday night. Cash reported he paid, early today, the $10,000 ransom demanded.

By calling in the F. B. I. agents he defied a threat that his son would be slain if he did so.

The crowd was told to be ready at daybreak if called upon to begin a search of the flat surrounding farming country known as the Redlands.

W. J. Cash, uncle of James, jr., said there was hope of making another contact with the kidnapers tonight.

The worried father, hollow-eyed from loss of sleep, secluded himself in his home with the shades drawn. Federal officers and local authorities withdrew.

Ashmael Cash, nephew of the boy's father, conducted a hunt on his own in the plane from which

Offices Bill Given Up for This Session

By Sidney Olson.

The Administration yesterday formally abandoned the bitterly-controversial Government reorganization bill for this dying session of Congress.

Announcement of the action, which fixes the bill in the pigeonhole to which the House recommitted it on April 8, was accompanied by a promise that the new Congress next January immediately will be faced with the measure in a new and undetermined form.

The Senate majority leader, Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, still predicting June 10 adjournment, made the announcement in the late afternoon, reading to a score of reporters a statement prepared by the respective Senate and House reorganization committee chairmen, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, and Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina.

The statement concluded:

"Majority Leaders Barkley and Rayburn of the Senate and House respectively, stated that this program has the approval of the President."

Landon Urges Cities to Fight Machine Vote

Tolerance of Crooked Rule of Politics Held Danger by G. O. P. Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Aurora, Ill., May 31.—Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate in 1936, asserted tonight "there is a tolerance in this country which must be fought along with intolerance—the tolerance of crooked city and State political machines."

The former Kansas Governor spoke at a program commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the First Congregational Church of Aurora, the church in which the first Republican Congressional district convention in Illinois was held nearly 84 years ago.

"There is too much tolerance of the unholy alliance between politics and crime," Landon said, "and too many people take it for granted, saying nothing can be done, instead of fighting against the evil. It has become too much the fashion to sneer at things worthwhile."

He told his listeners that "we'll muddle through this economic confusion if we cling to two basic fundamentals—the maintenance of decent, free public discussion and the true spirit of tolerance."

The Kansan said he had become conscious of "a spirit of growing

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who once suggested that a wax figure of Adolf Hitler should be placed in a "Chamber of Horrors" at the 1939 New York World's Fair, came in for comparison with the German Fuehrer himself today.

Irate city councilmen, called back from their holidays by the mayor to attend an assertedly "illegal" special session, adjourned in turmoil after heaping abuse on what they described as the dictatorial tactics of LaGuardia.

"No one can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear," shouted Councilman Spellman, Democrat.

"There is another gentleman whom it would seem that God Almighty created in the same pattern," he continued. "There is a physical as well as a political similarity. The gentleman is short, the gentleman is an exhibitionist, the gentleman is photogenic, the gentleman is impatient and discourteous, and the gentleman is named Adolf Hitler."

"LaGuardia may be all of that, but he does not yet have the power of his photogenic counterpart, Adolf Hitler."

The furore arose over LaGuardia's action in sending out copies of his message to newspapers "for immediate release" before the councilmen themselves received it.

Armstrong's Punches Lift 'Ross' Crown

New Champion First to Hold Both Feather, Welter Titles.

Victim Refuses to Quit But Is Badly Beaten Before 40,000.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

Madison Square Bowl, Long Island City, N. Y., May 31.—Dusky Henry Armstrong's bloody and busy gloves scrawled an indelible chapter into pugilistic history tonight as he punched Barney Ross from beneath the world's welterweight crown in 15 rounds of surprising fisticuffs.

Thus the chocolate-colored fighter, who emerged from muddy Mississippi flatlands of St. Louis to high estate in fistiana, became the first man in the sport's history to hold both the featherweight and welterweight crowns. He won all the way, amassing one of the largest margins ever recorded in a championship scrap.

He left Ross badly battered, weak and exhausted, but, to the departed champion's eternal credit, he couldn't stop him, couldn't make him quit. Ross gave a superb exhibition of courage under fire, but his efforts were futile. He was a badly-beaten man when the final gong rang.

Ross' Right Eye Closed.

Ross' right eye was closed clamlike at the end of the seventh round. His head looked as lop-sided as an old, 50-cent football from taking the unrelenting rain of blows. Blood trickled from his puffed and swollen mouth, and his nose looked mashed and red. He wasn't seriously damaged, however, merely sliced thin and red like lean strips of bacon.

Armstrong, on the other hand, was unmarked. A faint cloud of steam caused by perspiration and the chill, night air oozed from his body at the end of the fight. Otherwise he looked as fresh as the proverbial daisy, and apparently able to go 15 more rounds at the same blistering pace.

It wasn't a great fight, not even a good one, for Ross was tired and drawn as early as the third round. His punches lacked steam and he was strictly on the defensive from the fifth round on. He looked more like an old man looking for peace and quiet, not the tumultuous struggle of the prize ring, as Armstrong drove him around the ring.

Hit With Both Hands.

It was apparent from the very outset that the challenger's great fistic ambitions could not be denied—not by Ross, at least, unless aided by an unexpected miracle. Armstrong crowded him continually, getting to him with both hands frequently in the earlier rounds, and at will from the eighth on. He also shoved, butted and used his elbows to best advantage, and Ross, a crafty fighter in his salad days who would

$2,500 Bond Set For Each of 85 in Auto 'Trust' Case

South Bend, Ind., May 31 (AP).—Federal Judge Thomas W. Slick today fixed $2,500 bond for each of the 85 defendants in the Government's automotive antitrust case, involving three major motor companies and their subsidiaries.

He set the bonds for the Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corporation, General Motors Corporation, 32 affiliated finance companies and subsidiaries, and 50 executives.

Man Found Dead Under Taft Bridge

A man identified as George E. Reeden, of 2003 Columbia road northwest, was found dead last night under the Taft Bridge on Connecticut avenue, his skull shattered and his chest crushed. Police said they believed the man had leaped or fallen from the bridge to the roadway, a drop of 85 feet.

3-Year-Old Missing.

A 3-year-old boy, Garland Wroten, jr., was reported to police early today as missing from his home at 1112 C street southeast. Members of the family said he disappeared at 6 o'clock last night.

Court Denies Wallace Plea In Stock Case

Hughes Refutes Charge of Contradiction in Two Rulings.

But Agriculture Chief Calls Decision Victory; NLRB Wins.

(Text on Page 9.)

By Robert C. Albright.

The Supreme Court yesterday aimed a second pointed barb at Secretary Wallace for failing to hold "full hearings" in the Kansas City stockyards case, then stepped down from the bench for a summer recess.

Rejecting a Government appeal for rehearing of the case, Justice Hughes called the arguments of Wallace and Solicitor General Jackson "unwarranted" and "wholly unfounded." With unprecedented vigor, Hughes denied the court had either reversed itself or handed down a decision "contrary to law."

"The effort to establish a case for rehearing, either because of an asserted inconsistency in our rulings or because of lack of opportunity for full argument is futile," said Justice Hughes.

Labor Board Upheld.

"What further proceedings the Secretary may see fit to take in the light of our decision, or what determinations may be made by the district court in relation to any such proceedings, are not matters which we should attempt to forecast or hypothetically to decide."

Because Hughes told the district court to determine what to do with $700,000 of impounded charges paid in excess of stockyard rates fixed by the Secretary, Wallace last night called the opinion "a highly important victory for the Government." He said that left a way "open for a decision on the merits eventually to be made."

But Wallace accused the court of involved reasoning, which both the farmers and the livestock commission men will find it difficult to follow" and expressed "regret" that "after five years of litigation the court has not yet seen fit to make a decision upon the rights of the matter."

New Suit Forecast.

Wallace said the decision means impounded funds cannot be paid over to the livestock commission men and their attorneys "without a determination that the excess charges which the fund represents are reasonable and proper."

"This determination," Wallace said, "in all probability will be made by means of a rehearing by the Department of Agriculture in accordance with the procedure now required both by the department and by the court—with further review on the merits, if need be, by the district court."

The Hughes opinion highlighted the court's last decision day of the present term and all but overshadowed two significant judicial

Morgenthau Talks With Bank Board On June Finances

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., met Tuesday unexpectedly with the executive committee of the open market committee of the Federal Reserve Board to discuss the Treasury's June-quarter financing.

The conferees declined to comment on the two-hour session, but it was learned that the discussion involved an effort to prevent the Government bond market from reaching new heights.

Federal Reserve Board officials, it was learned, are opposed to any program which would send the bond market to higher levels and lower yields. They proposed retiring through cash the $350,000,000 of tax bills coming due between June 15 and 18 and refunding other maturing bills and $618,000,000 of 2⅞ per cent notes.

The conference originally was scheduled for today. Other Treasury officials attending the meeting were Daniel W. Bell, Director of the Budget, and Wayne C. Taylor, Fiscal Assistant Secretary.

Mayor Linked In Johnstown Strike Bribery

Accused With Councilman of Taking $32,077 From Bethlehem.

Johnstown, Pa., May 31 (AP).—An information was filed tonight charging Mayor Daniel J. Shields of Johnstown and Councilman Fulton I. Connor with bribery, extortion and malfeasance in office in connection with $36,449.50 paid to them during the "little steel" strike here.

City Councilman Carroll said the charges were filed after an investigation of testimony at the National Labor Board's hearing of the Bethlehem Steel case here and of the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee in Washington.

Witnesses told the labor board the Bethlehem Steel Co. had agreed to furnish $25,000 to help maintain law and order in Johnstown during the strike. Francis C. Martin, chairman of the Johnstown citizens committee, was named in the information as paying to Shields $32,077.50, which witnesses before the board stated had come from Bethlehem officials.

Shields also was charged with receiving $4,372 direct from C. R. Ellicott, general manager of the Bethlehem mill here.

Connor, who acted as treasurer of the citizens committee for a time, also was charged with receiving $25,000 of the money.

35 Warplanes Reported Lost In China Battle

Japanese Say They Shot Down 20 Over Hankow as Chiang Claims 15.

Shanghai (Wednesday), June 1. More than 100 planes clashed over Hankow in one of the greatest air battles of the war today. Both sides claimed victory.

Japanese declared 30 of their planes raided Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's capital and shot down 20 Chinese planes, while only one of their own failed to return. China's aviation headquarters, however, declared 54 Japanese planes attempted to make the raid, but were beaten off with a loss of 15.

While Japanese planes struck at Hankow and Canton, ground forces of both armies apparently were deadlocked again in the vicinity of Lanfeng, along the Lunghai Railroad in Central China.

Severe fighting was reported among the mud-walled villages between the Lunghai and the Yellow River with Chinese troops still counterattacking to break the Japanese drive westward toward Hankow.

Chinese pursuit planes, Chiang's air officials said, knew in advance of the approach of Japan's air raiders and hovered above Hankow waiting for their chance.

When the invaders appeared, they said, the Chinese planes dove and scattered the Japanese squadrons.

3d Suspect Seized in Attack As Girl, 13, Battles for Life

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Three suspects were held early today in connection with the brutal attack on 13-year-old Etta May Coleman near her farmhouse home at Middlebrook, Md., yesterday.

While the child, ravished and beaten insensible, clung desperately to life in the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring, District and Maryland authorities questioned three colored men, one arrested here and a second near Middlebrook.

The third suspect was arrested shortly after 1 a. m. County Detective James S. McAuliffe, heading the investigation, predicted the crime would be "solved" within a few hours. He declined to divulge the name of the last suspect, expressing fear of mob violence.

During a brief lucid moment after reaching the hospital, Etta May reportedly named a 200-pound Washington colored man as her assailant. Less than six hours later, local and Montgomery County police arrested this man in a midtown apartment house where he is janitor.

Although he denied knowledge of the affair and said he spent the entire day in Washington, the suspect was held at the First Precinct

500 Villagers Die When Insurgents Bomb Breadline

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona, May 31.—Beaten off this loyalist city by antiaircraft fire, insurgent bombers took the lives of women and children at Granollers today and sank a British freighter at Valencia.

Dead at Granollers were an estimated 500 persons, with hundreds more mangled.

Three times air raid alarms sent the people of Barcelona scuttling for shelter. Each time the rattle of antiaircraft guns followed the siren's wailing and no bombs fell. After the third alarm Gen Franco's bombers gave up their raid on the crowded city and headed north.

Sixteen miles from here the bombers, five tri-motored fighters, swooped upon the Catalan village of Granollers. Long lines of men, women and children were in the market place, waiting for their potato rations. The bombs dropped on the exposed crowd.

The raid caught many women. At one spot 50 persons were killed; at another, 55. Some 25 buildings were destroyed.

Many Women Killed.

Hospital facilities in the town, whose normal population was swelled by an influx of refugees from the war areas of government Spain, were inadequate to care for the wounded. Many injured were sent to Barcelona and to nearby villages.

Most of the dead were women, officials said. In one group of 47 dead, women numbered 40. The morgue was too small to care for victims and relief workers laid dead along the walls of the cemetery. The ratio there was five women or children to every man killed.

Roads leading out of the town were jammed with civilians fleeing with their belongings. The hospital at La Garriga, 8 miles away, cared for 100 of the wounded who were able to make their way there.

Sagunto Bombed.

Insurgent planes also bombed Sagunto, 14 miles northeast of Valencia, killing several persons and wounding ten.

Government airplanes bombed Palma, Gen. Franco's base on the island of Mallorca, for the first time in four months, and set three insurgent ships afire. Government pilots also bombed the insurgent airport at Lacenia, Catalonia, where it was said 17 Italian Fiat airplanes were lined up. "The results were efficient," an official loyalist report said at Madrid.

Sinking of the Penthames damage to a Spanish [illegible] Valencia harbor brought the number of ships [illegible] insurgent bombs this week. The British [illegible] was sunk May 24 [illegible] attend May 28, and the [illegible] steamer Djem was set afire yesterday.

Insurgents Attack.

Hendaye, France, May 31 (AP).—Spanish insurgent forces sent infantry, artillery and aviation against the Teruel-Valencia highway today to sustain the advance to the sea started with the capture of Mora de Rubielos by Gen. Jose Varela.

London, May 31 (AP).—Britain's growing resentment at the Spanish insurgent bombing of British ships in government ports was fanned still further today by the sinking of the British freighter Penthames in Valencia's harbor.

14 States Seek Law to Prevent Back Pay Levies

By the Associated Press.

Fourteen States joined yesterday to seek Congressional legislation outlawing collection of Federal income taxes for the last 12 years from certain classes of State and municipal employes who may be liable for them under a recent Supreme Court decision.

Representatives of the States decided at a conference here to ask the Treasury to support such legislation. A meeting with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was arranged for today.

The conference was called by Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., of New York, because of the Supreme Court decision last week in the New York Port Authority case. The court held members of the authority were not performing an essential State function and hence their salaries were subject to Federal income taxes.

New Yorker Chairman.

Some Treasury officials expressed the opinion after the decision that the court had implied it would uphold Federal taxation of all State salaries. Under previous decisions, State salaries had been considered exempt from Federal income taxes and vice versa.

Solicitor General Henry Epstein, of New York, said that in his opinion the decision had opened the possibility that some State and municipal employes might be liable for taxes, interest and penalties from 1926. In that year, tax laws were changed and Congress passed an act barring retroactive assessments against any local government employes who previously had been flatly exempted by statute.

Epstein was elected chairman of the conference and Austin J. Tobin, assistant general counsel of the Port of New York, secretary.

Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, introduced yesterday a bill to forestall retroactive collection of taxes. However, members of the conference said another measure probably would be drafted after the discussions with Treasury officials.

A statement issued by the conference said it had had the "sympathetic co-operation" of the Treasury Department.

Government officials have expressed themselves as deeply concerned with the ruinous consequence of penalizing innocent State and municipal employes by the cumulative imposition of back taxes," the statement continued.

Long-Range Welfare Program For D. C. Mrs. Bernton's Wish

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. HARRY S. BERNTON.

City Should Be Ready to End Transition Period, New President of Council of Social Agencies Says.

By Christine Sadler.

A long-range, well-rounded social program that will make ample provisions for health, recreation, and leisure time activities is the particular present interest of Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, leader in welfare work, who recently was elected president of the Washington Council of Social Agencies.

"We must begin now to work for a plan which we can follow through over a long period. During the past five or six years we have been in a mixed-up transition period, and it is time now that we adjusted ourselves and worked out a rounded progrom.

"We should take the lead in Washington; for other cities are looking to us to do so," she says.

"Ideals as Well as Plans."

An essential part of this program, Mrs. Bernton believes, is "interpretation to the Community."

"The council's major duty at this time, as I see it, is to interpret to the community—to present ideals, as well as plans."

Mrs. Bernton has been active as a volunteer worker in many phases of the city's social welfare life ever since she came here 18 years ago. Last year she was chairman of the special committee of the Council of Social Agencies, which appeared before Congress in connection with the relief situation in the District of Columbia. She served as vice president of the council during the presidency of Dr. Russell J. Clinchy.

She is a member of the budget and policy committee and of the board of trustees of the Community Chest, for which she has been a worker since 1932. She has served as a vice president of the Chest and as a member of the speakers' committee.

Jewish organizations likewise have claimed her attention. She is a past president of the Washington Chapter of the Council of Jewish Women and a member of the boards of the Jewish Community Center and the Jewish Social Service Agencies.

Hobby Is Gardening.

Keenly alive to welfare conditions, Mrs. Bernton's interest in and work for social bodies extends back to her college days. At Wheaton College, where she was graduated, she took sociology classes. She did postgraduate work in the social sciences at the University of Indiana and at Brown University.

She is the wife of one of the city's most prominent physicians and the mother of two sons, one of them at Harvard.

Her principal hobby is gardening, and for that reason she is one of the first Washingtonians to leave the District to open her summer home at Blue Field Summit, Pa., where she has been busy this week planting her delphinium. She also is very fond of dogs. She is vivacious, zestful and attractive.

On Friday—Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the D. C. Tuberculosis Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Drill Contest Set.

The annual competitive drill of the cadet corps of the Industrial Home School at Blue Plains will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m.

New NEC Cash Is Won Despite Politics Charge

Senate Boosts Funds as 2 Democrats Attack Agency's Purpose.

By the Associated Press.

Administration forces in the Senate increased funds for the National Emergency Council yesterday despite protests by Democratic critics that the agency actually was a political organization.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, told the Senate that the NEC, set up by the President to coordinate work of all Federal emergency agencies in the States, had participated chiefly in politics "in my State."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, added that the agency's only purpose was "political."

Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, and half a dozen other Administration men sharply denied this. By a resounding voice vote, they and their supporters awarded the agency $850,000, an increase of $600,000 over the sum voted by the House.

Wheeler said that if "some of these pseudo politicians have their way" in Iowa and Gillette is defeated by Wearin "you can bet all the tea in China that Iowa will go Republican."

Senator Clark challenged any Senator to show where the agency had done any actual co-ordinating.

The barrage of criticism finally brought a defense of NEC's activities as a co-ordinating and information agency from Senators Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona; Russell (Democrat), of Georgia; Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Pope (Democrat), of Idaho; Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama; McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, who recently won in the Florida primaries after receiving Administration support.

14 Power Firms Asked to Help on 'Death Sentence'

By the United Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday appealed to executives of 14 major utility systems to co-operate in carrying out the "death sentence" clause of the 1935 holding company act in an orderly manner.

At the close of the first conference with the committee of holding company executives, the commission issued a statement saying that it had restated its confidence in the utility act as a "constructive formula for the betterment of the industry."

The statement said that while the executives reaffirmed their belief in the "soundness of the fundamental principle of diversity" they indicated that some constructive progress could be made under the statute.

2 Destroyers Started.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

The Gallup Poll

Wage Differential Is Favored by Voters as Congress Debates Proposed Law.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, May 31.—Public opinion, as measured in a Nation-wide survey, overwhelmingly indorses the principle that any wage-hour legislation passed by Congress should provide for a wage differential among the various geographical sections.

George Gallup.

With Southern Senators fighting to establish such a differential, the issue has caused a sharp split in the Democratic party in Congress, lined up Southern industry against Northern industry, and become the chief bone of contention before the joint conference considering the wage-hour bill this week.

The survey, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, found that more than six out of every ten voters throughout the Nation favor the idea of geographical differentials. Most of them expressed the sentiment that living conditions vary so much from North to South that a single minimum wage standard for the Nation would be "unwise."

Voters in all income levels and in every section were asked: "If Congress passes a minimum wage law do you think the minimum wage per hour should be the same all over the country, or should it be different for different sections?" The vote was:

Same	38%
Different	62

All sections of the country voted in favor of the differential. The greatest amount of sentiment for a uniform wage standard was found in New England, many of whose factories and industries have been moving South to take advantage of lower wage scales. A typical comment from the voters throughout New England was that a uniform minimum wage "would help equalize competition" between New England and the South.

In the Southern States the institute found approximately three-fifths of voters in favor of a differential, to two-fifths in favor of a uniform minimum throughout the country. The latter group was made up chiefly of workers in the lower income levels, who apparently feel that under a system of differentials they would not derive as much benifit as under the other system.

The survey found no essential difference in sentiment among Democrats and Republicans throughout the Nation. More than 60 per cent in both parties agree that differentials should be set up.

Two Questions Asked.

In companion question the institute asked voters in each section: "If the minimum hourly wage is set higher in this part of the country than in other sections, do you think it will hurt business here?"

The highest affirmative vote was in New England, where approximately half the voters felt business would be hurt. Throughout the Nation as a whole, however, voters expressed relatively little fear that sections with higher standards would lose business. Of all voters in the survey, 37 per cent said they thought business would be hurt while 63 per cent said it would not.

South Favors 25c an Hour.

Last February the institute conducted a survey which showed what the voters in each geographical section thought the lowest wage should be in their areas. The results revealed a wide difference between the South and other sections. In the Southern States the average figure mentioned by voters was 25 cents per hour; elsewhere it averaged 40 cents.

ENGINES WILL BE WORN LESS THIS SUMMER

But you want to know exactly why. You're leery of general statements that won't save you one piston ring or one quart of oil. So you want what the doctors call a specific. And that's what you get—a definite, substantial, physical protector that actually exists right in your engine as soon as you get it OIL-PLATED. Only patented Conoco Germ Processed oil from Your Mileage Merchant's station can give your engine OIL-PLATING. Other oils can't. No matter how much refining is claimed for them, they cannot surpass the correct refining of Conoco Germ Processed oil, but refining only takes things out. Going much farther, Germ Processing adds in the patented man-made substance that gives your engine OIL-PLATING. Only this addition by the Germ Process makes oil "join up" with the working parts, to keep them OIL-PLATED. All the while Germ Processed oil is used, OIL-PLATING is permanent. Like other plating, OIL-PLATING keeps wear from getting through. And like other plating, OIL-PLATING can't drain down at any time. Actually united to each surface, OIL-PLATING gives your engine lubrication that needn't wait for the oil pump . . . Before other oils could even begin to circulate, OIL-PLATING is ready to lubricate! Thus you know why the much-advertised harm of "dry starting" doesn't mean a thing with your engine OIL-PLATED. And you wouldn't expect any good plating to go flying off at Summer speeds, or to frizzle away in the Summer heat. Then expect the heat indicator to stay on the safe side, while the gauge-stick keeps saying, "Still full of Conoco Germ Processed oil!" That's why it's smart and thrifty today to have Your Mileage Merchant OIL-PLATE YOUR ENGINE. Continental Oil Co.

Taxi Operator Asks Police to Make Ghost Pay

Driver Found Woman Gone When He Offered Her a Cigarette.

When Otis "Willie" Love came home early yesterday after 12 hours' hard work, he wasn't whistling his favorite tune, "Let's Put Out the Lights and Go to Sleep."

In fact, Willie wasn't whistling. Moreover, he didn't put out the lights and he had a terrible time getting to sleep. He just pulled the covers up over his head—and tried to think of nothing.

Willie had seen a ghost. He had not only seen a ghost, but he had talked to it. And not only that, he had taken it for a ride in his taxi.

Willie, a 35-year-old hacker, lives a sober life with his wife and 2-year-old son at 624 Columbia road northwest. He rents Dixie Cab No. 5 for the night shift—at least he did until yesterday.

Hailed at 3 A. M.

Shortly after 3 a. m. Willie was hailed at North Capitol and W streets, near Prospect Hill Cemetery, by a tall white woman swathed in clothes of deepest black. She gave Willie an address in northwest Washington; and Willie, the cab and the passenger drove on through the silent streets.

"You're driving too fast," the woman said in deep and hollow tones. "I'm only going 20," replied Willie.

Silence . . .

Then, "Have you a cigarette?" asked the Voice from the back seat. Willie reached into his pocket, and, without taking his eyes from the road, handed a package of cigarettes to the passenger.

But the cigarettes were not taken from his hand, so Willie looked around. No one was there.

Searched for Fare.

Willie brought the car to a screeching halt and began a systematic search for his fare. On the floor, in the tool compartment, under the hood, on the roof—but the only thing he found was the blackness of the night. He was so upset that he forgot the address the woman had given him.

So Willie went to the Second Precinct Station. As one of his friends said yesterday, "He sho' must 'a bin scared to go to that station house, 'cause us cab drivers like to keep away from station houses."

The police sent out a scout car in search of the mysterious passenger. She had disappeared into thin air.

At the police station, Willie proved to everybody's satisfaction that he was cold sober. In fact, by this time he was so cold that he had begun to shiver.

He thought of other taxicab ghosts that have haunted Washington. One in particular, also a woman, would make an annual appearance here up to a few years ago. She would get into a cab and order the driver to a Baltimore address.

The Husband's Story.

On arrival in Baltimore, the passenger would have disappeared. But those cab drivers who weren't too frightened to continue to the address always came back with the same story: "I drove up to the house, and there was the woman's husband. He paid the fare from Washington and as he went back into the house he said that his wife came over to see him regularly. She had died several years ago and was buried in a Washington cemetery."

Willie thought of that and went home and tried to forget it all.

His wife said yesterday: "We know it must have been a ghost. Because Willie heard the police say that a woman's body was found on North Capitol street this morning right where the passenger disappeared. The body didn't have a head on it and when the officers went to pick the body up, it ran through the streets and disappeared into Prospect Hill Cemetery. That's what the police said, so it must be true."

Mrs. Love added that Willie had never seen a ghost before. She is now going to try to persuade her husband to drive in the daytime instead of at night.

"I was a little worried about it when he finally told me what happened," she confessed. "He didn't say a word when he came home from the police station. He was white as a sheet, and he hasn't eaten a thing all day."

A neighbor chimed in: "If that ghost-woman gets back into Willie's cab, we're gwine have to bury him."

Maryland School Girl Victim of Criminal Attack

Station pending further investigation of his story. He admitted, police said, visiting in the vicinity of Middlebrook several days ago.

The girl's father, a dairy and truck farmer, visited Washington police headquarters shortly before midnight and advanced the theory his daughter was "honestly mistaken" in her identification of the colored suspect.

Following a lengthy conference with Detective Sergt. John Wise, of the Homicide Squad, Coleman said: "I believe my daughter was confused. She could have been honestly mistaken in her identification. I'm afraid the police haven't solved this thing yet."

The other suspect, a colored youth, was taken into custody near the Coleman farm a few hours after the girl was found. He is being held at Rockville.

Etta May was on her way to the Gaithersburg school yesterday morning when she apparently met her attacker. It was along a narrow dirt road within a stone's throw of her home. It was midday before her unconscious form was found some 200 yards in the woods.

A little lunch bag, her school books and an extra pair of white shoes, found by the roadside, led to discovery of the child.

After an hour's hunt through the thick underbrush, Fireman Grubb Wretchter, of Gaithersburg, traced a series of muffled moans to the spot where Etta May was lying.

She was lying face down, according to Wrechter, and her hair and clothing were soaked with blood. The child was rushed to the Sandy Spring Hospital, where Dr. J. W. Bird, head physician, confirmed fears she had been criminally assaulted. He said she also suffered a fractured skull and multiple body bruises.

Etta May left home about 7:40 a. m. to walk as usual to the main highway, where she boarded the school bus. It is 1 mile from her secluded farmhouse to the bus stop. She carried the extra pair of white shoes to replace the ones she wore while walking along the uneven dirt road.

Some hours later, Mrs. Dorothy Smith, a neighbor, was walking the same roadway to the grocery store. She found Etta May's shoes, lunch bag and books lying in the grass near a path leading into the woods.

The girl had walked less than half way to the bus stop when she met her attacker, investigators found. The scene where her crumpled form was discovered is in a desolate, wooded section of the Middlebrook region.

It is believed the child was knocked unconscious before she was ravished and after regaining her senses, tried to run toward her home.

Rep. Robertson Asks $25,000 for Memorial in Virginia to Gen. Muhlenberg.

ROBERTSON.

An appropriation of $25,000 for erection of a monument to Gen. Peter Gabriel Muhlenberg, Revolutionary War hero, at Woodstock, Va., is provided in a bill passed by the House yesterday and sent to the Senate. Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, is author of the bill.

Gen. Muhlenberg, who was a Lutheran clergyman, preached a farewell sermon in a church at Woodstock just before entering the military service against the British.

Hope was expressed in the Virginia delegation of getting the bill through the Senate quickly.

Czechs Close Mountainous Border Paths

No Explanation Given for Barring of Travelers in Wooded Areas.

By the United Press.

Dresden, Germany, May 31.—Czechoslovak guards are closing the mountainous frontiers of Silesia and Saxony, barring all footpaths and wooded slopes leading across the border, it was disclosed today without an official explanation.

All means of reaching Czechoslovakia across the Reisengebirge and Isergebirge Mountain chains were barred to travelers as result of measures which started Monday.

The mountain frontier paths had remained open since the German-Czech crisis flared May 21. They were used throughout the recurring war threats along the frontier by German and Czech hikers.

The Silesian and Saxony borders ordinarily are crossed from the German side by means of special passes issued to residents of the districts whose business life frequently takes them to Czech soil.

Nazi Planes "Proven."

Berlin, May 31 (U.P.).—Czechoslovakia today presented the Foreign Office with 15 "proven" instances in which military planes crossed the frontier since May 20 when Prague began mustering troops in fear of an invasion.

Observers believed that the note would not aggravate the state of tension between Prague and Berlin.

Troops Withdrawn.

Praha, May 31 (AP).—Authoritative sources said today Czechoslovak troops were being withdrawn gradually from the German border region.

Nazi Police Hold 339 in Raids as 'Drug Peddlers'

Berlin (Wednesday), June 1 (U.P.).—Police early today raided several restaurants along the Kurfuerstendamm, the largest thoroughfare in Berlin's West End, and arrested 339 persons, including 317 Jews.

The raids were made, police said, on suspicion that wholesale peddling in drugs and foreign exchange was taking place in the establishments.

Officials said 76 of those arrested were criminals while "numerous" others were suspected of subversive political activities.

A number of foreigners were among those arrested.

Lawrence Widow Denied Estate Rule

Prescott, Ariz., May 31 (AP).—Mrs. Jane Stout Lawrence, widow of the late Marcus Jay Lawrence, wealthy rancher formerly of Washington, D. C., who was killed in a fight here May 11, lost an attempt in court here today to gain control of his estate.

Superior Judge Levi S. Udall denied her petition for letters of administration, and also denied her petition to oust Claud F. Harmon, Prescott accountant, as administrator of the estate in Arizona.

The will and codicil disposed of Arizona property valued at $120,000, and of an additional estate of $400,000. Benificiaries named were Lawrence's mother, Mrs. Carrie Lawrence, Washington, D. C., a half brother, Paul Lawrence, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, and several others.

Japanese Attache, Departing, Leaves Gift of Old Armor

Col. Masochika Hirata, military attache at the Japanese Embassy, today will leave a priceless suit of ancient Japanese armor at the Army and Navy Club as a farewell gift in appreciation of the "many courtesies" shown him by American officers.

Col. Hirata came to Washington in 1936 about the time of the arrest here of John S. Farnsworth, a former Naval lieutenant commander, on charges of conspiracy to sell naval secrets to the Japanese stirred old fears of Oriental espionage.

He will return to Tokyo in a few days to be assigned to a new post which his colleagues at the Embassy last night believed would not be diplomatic.

The suit of armor, insured for $1,500 and inclosed in a $250 glass case, was worn by a Japanese war lord of the Chu-Shu district of Japan over which Chinese war planes flew a few days ago.

The presentation will be made at the Army and Navy Club at 11 a. m. today. The gift will be received in the name of the club by Brig. Gen. Frank C. Burnett, assistant adjutant general and club president.

Col. Hirata, who has not seen his wife and children in Tokyo for nearly two years, will be succeeded by Col. Masabumi Yamanouchi.

U. S. Oil Officials Confer With Hull On Mexican Move

By the United Press.

American oil company officials met with Secretary of State Hull yesterday to "exchange information" regarding expropriation of foreign oil companies by the Mexican government.

The group, led by President W. S. Farish of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, conferred with Hull for more than an hour. Farish was accompanied by Company Counsel T. R. Armstrong and Donald Richberg, former NRA administrator.

Thus far the State Department has not sent to the oil companies the settlement proposal filed with Hull last week by Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera, they said.

The oil men said the companies still maintain their original position that they suffered a denial of justice in the expropriation proceedings and that the only acceptable solution would be prompt, effective and fair reimbursement for the properties.

Bandit Killed as 'Tip' Foils Bank Robbery

Mortons Gap, Ky., May 31 (AP).—Shooting from peepholes above the bank vault, officers who had been tipped in advance killed one man and later captured two others in an attempted holdup of the Planters Bank here today.

Colonel Tells Of Spies' Plan To Kidnap Him

Other High Officers and Mystery Blonde Appear Before U. S. Jury.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—High officers of the United States Army, one a colonel in charge of one of New York's harbor defenses, appeared before the Federal grand jury, as did two women today in the Government's investigation into foreign spy ring activities.

The women, one an unidentified blonde, the other a nurse and former proprietor of a nursing home, are considered important witnesses by Government investigators.

The jury reportedly was told that Col. H. W. T. Elgin, commandant of Fort Totten on Long Island Sound, was slated for kidnaping in the hope secret information might be elicited from him.

The other Army officers appearing today were Maj. J. N. Dalton, until a few weeks ago assistant chief of staff in charge of intelligence; Maj. Stanley Grogan, executive officer of the Fourth District CCC Camp at Richmond, Va., and Capt. James K. de Armond of the air corps at Mitchel Field.

Maj. Grogan formerly was assistant to Maj. Dalton.

Mrs. Kate Moog Busch, former nursing home operator who is of German descent, twice before has appeared before the grand jury. It was the unidentified blonde's first appearance.

Bremen Man Recalled.

Another witness recalled today was Johann Kleiber, second radio officer of the North German Lloyd steamship Bremen, who was held in bail of $15,000 after his appearance bfeore Federal Judge Vincent L. Leibell last Friday.

ance before Federal Judge Vincent Lamar Hardy told Judge Leibell, is being held for questioning concerning the disappearance of Dr. Ignatz T. Griebel, important Government witness and reserve officer in the U. S. Army, who fled to Germany in the Bremen a few days before the grand jury started its inquiry.

After the grand jury adjourned for the day, the blonde woman was escorted to the Federal Bureau of Investigation offices by special agents.

British Girl Bailed.

New Orleans, May 31 (AP).—Sylvia May Bradshaw, 22, of Hove, Sussex, England, seized last Thursday in Shreveport, La., under suspicion of espionage, was freed on $1,000 bail in the technical custody of the British consul here today after a hearing on an allegation of passport violation, to which the case was reduced.

No espionage charge was placed.

Capsule Claimed To Keep Drivers From Sleepiness

New York, May 31 (AP).—It may not be long before an automobile driver will swallow a capsule to help keep him out of motoring accidents at night.

That procedure was hinted today in experiments reported in an article in the Ohio Medical Journal.

Use of the capsule as "safe driving medicine" was indicated by the experimenters, Dr. Ralph C. Wise, eye specialist of Mansfield, Ohio, and Dr. O. H. Shettler, of the medical department of the Westinghouse Electric Co.

A number of motorists who underwent tests reported that whereas they had dreaded night driving prior to taking the capsules, they found motoring no longer a strain after using the medicine.

Poison Feared as Man Is Found Unconscious

John W. Dawson, 72, 919 I street northwest, was in serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night, suffering apparently from poison. The aged man was found unconscious near the Lincoln Memorial yesterday, and was taken to Emergency Hospital. Dawson has no known relatives in the city and police notified his daughter, Mrs. E. O. Van Herbulis, at Sorrento, Fla.

engaging them in thrilling dogfights, part of which could be seen from the city below.

Chinese declared they shot down 12 Japanese planes, losing only 2 themselves, and then pursued the invaders, shooting down 3 more near Kiukiang.

The air battle was the first heavy sky fighting since April 29, when Japanese planes raided Hankow and met Chinese in a half-hour indecisive battle.

Driven Off at Canton.

For the fourth successive day Japanese air raiders attacked Canton, metropolis of South China through which most of China's munitions come from abroad. The raid failed, Chinese said, because the arrival of 40 planes overnight "from somewhere in the north" caught the Japanese by surprise.

Chinese acknowledged that 5 of 22 Japanese planes broke through, but declared they were pursued and fled after hurriedly dropping a few bombs on Canton's outskirts.

Japan's Lunghai forces were arrayed in three roughly parallel columns pointing west below the railroad.

Two Exonerated In Traffic Deaths Of Boy and Man

Two motorists were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after inquests into the traffic deaths of Richard Bitanga, 5, 915 Twentieth street northwest, and William Randall, 60, 633 I street northwest.

The jury returned verdicts of accidental deaths in each case.

Benjamin C. Johnson, jr., 30, 1213 M street northwest, was absolved from blame in the death of Richard Batanga after witnesses testified that the young victim ran into the street in front of his home right into the path of Johnson's car.

Alton M. Lee, 26, 1725 New Hampshire avenue northwest, was freed by the jury in the case of Randall, who died in Gallinger Hospital May 27. The jury was told that Randall walked into the street car.

intolerance in the United States, a little hardening toward those in need of relief" and added "we seem to be losing something of that pioneer spirit which recognized the vital need of helping one another."

The church, he averred, "must fight vigorously class and racial intolerance, which once more is raising its ugly head in this country."

In recognition of the fact that the Aurora church was the scene of a historic political meeting, Landon devoted much of his address to a recapitulation of party history in the Nation. He said:

"We have had two periods of great political confusion. The first came with the election of John Quincy Adams as President on the Republican ticket of that day which practically exterminated the Federalists. We probably now are approaching the end of the second period . . .

"Now it is apparent, even with all its political success, that the Democratic Party cannot and will not hold together. No longer is it possible to conceal the deep and bitter differences which divide the Democratic Party. We're still in a period of political confusion, but I believe an issue is forming."

"The spiritual economy of a nation is more important than its financial economy," he concluded. "We must show by our actions that our ideals are not dead."

Ransom Paid; Florida Boy's Death Feared

Kidnap

he sprays vegetable fields. He covered 75 miles but reported no sign of his missing cousin.

Many gave information they hoped would serve as a clew. A road construction watchman asserted a green sedan headed westward with several men and a weeping child slowed at his project. Some persons reported indications the kidnapers might have used a boat.

There were many supporters, including W. P. Cash, the lad's uncle, for a theory that kidnapers were local residents. The child was easily frightened by strangers but the mother, helping her husband close the grocery for the night, heard no outcry when he was taken. Maps which accompanied the ransom notes reflected a thorough knowledge of local geography.

In accordance with instructions given by the kidnapers, the senior Cash made a solitary drive in the misty dawn today until winking headlights gave a signal. There he tossed a bundle of small bills, making up the $10,000 ransom, to the roadside and returned in high spirits, reporting he expected word by noon as to where he could find his boy, "Skeegie."

As no word came Mrs. Cash was near collapse. Business went on as usual in the filling station in front of the frame house, however, with Jim Milzel, a youthful attendant, pumping gas for a boom trade.

Clews in Levine Case.

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 31 (AP). Investigators indicated tonight that the finding of the body of 12-year-old Peter Levine gave them several clews which may lead to the kidnapers who killed him.

After a series of emphatic denials to other queries, detectives suddenly became mute when the question of fingerprints was brought up.

"No comment" was the only answer.

However, Lieut. George Reifenberger, in charge of Westchester County detectives, later said:

"We're much better off now."

Parted 37 Years, Woman Asks for Divorce—Gets It

Stating that she was convinced there was "no hope of a reconciliation with her husband" from whom she has been separated 37 years, Mrs. Minnie M. Baggett, 4038 K street northwest, yesterday obtained from John F. Baggett an absolute divorce on the grounds of desertion.

In her plaint, filed by Attorney Jean M. Boardman, Mrs. Baggett said they were married here and that in the summer of 1900 he deserted her, leaving her with five children. Two are now living. She added she wanted no alimony.

After listening to Mrs. Baggett's testimony and that of corroborating witnesses, Justice Oscar R. Luhring signed a decree granting her the divorce.

Maj. B. T. Ipock Falls to Death From N. Y. Hotel

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—Maj. Byron T. Ipock, 51, U. S. A., retired, fell to his death from the window of his second story hotel room today. Ipock, a native of North Carolina, enlisted as a private in the army in 1908 and won his first commission during the World War. He was retired in 1935 for disability in the line of duty.

Attaches of the Globe Hotel, where he had lived for the past two months, said he formerly made his home at the Ambassador Hotel in Washington.

2 Penny-Matchers Get $58 From Arizona Man

Joseph E. Wise, of Nogales, Ariz., was in Washington less than an hour yesterday before he had lost $58 matching pennies.

Wise was wiser and much sadder when he appeared at the First Precinct station to lodge a complaint. He said he met a man in a hotel on Union Station Plaza who suggested taking a walk. After several blocks, Wise said his "friend" introduced him to another man. The first man then suggested the penny matching game "to pass time."

Witchdoctor's War on 'Spirits' Related by Dr. M. W. Stirling

'Wishinu' of Jivaro Indians on Upper Amazon Is Man of Substance—But Not of Science—Ethnology Bulletin Reveals.

The wishinu, or doctor, of the Jivaro Indians on the headwaters of the Amazon River cures his patients by driving out disease spirits which have possessed them, but if he fails, the family of the patient may demand his head.

Such is the picture of the wishinu presented by Dr. Mathew W. Stirling, chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution in a report published as a bulletin of the bureau. Dr. Stirling lived nearly a year among the people.

The wishinu must undergo a month-long education—which is a lot of education for Jivaroland—before he can practice. A very rigid code of medical ethics requires him to answer sick calls at any hour of the night or day through trackless jungles, the bulletin says.

But by and large the wishinu is an able, honest and idealistic man, probably rich. He never doubts the correctness and effectiveness of his methods of diagnosis and cure.

Diagnosis is not so difficult for there are only six kinds of disease spirits, some one of which is responsible for almost any sickness. In treating a patient the "doctor" attempts to suck the spirit out into his own mouth.

If successful, he spits it out the door and with many gesticulations orders it not to enter the house again. The treatment is usually carried on in complete darkness. For an exceptionally high fee the wishinu will send the spirit to afflict some enemy.

Fix Will Face Trial; Wife Drops Charge

Fred Fix, 1708 Minnesota avenue southeast, will go on trial on a simple assault charge arising from the beating and burning of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Fix, last month, the district attorney's office announced yesterday.

Mrs. Fix, a young Public Health Service stenographer, had announced she would not prosecute her husband.

Parking Meters 'Previewed' and Voted a Success

Gadgets to Benefit 'Good' Driver, Standards Parley Is Told.

Parking meters, which Washington motorists are to see by the end of this year, were "previewed" yesterday at the opening of the Twenty-eighth Annual Conference on Weights and Measures.

H. W. Bearce, Bureau of Standards scientist who has been studying the gadgets for several months, predicted the parking meter will be "an advantage to the driver who observes established parking time limits and a disadvantage, or at least an inconvenience, to the driver who habitually disregards such parking time limits."

The District's 1939 supply bill authorizes the Commissioners to install and operate a number of the meters on an experimental basis.

Addressing the conference, whose four-day meeting is being held at the Bureau of Standards and the Hotel Washington, Bearce demonstrated 12 of the 15 makes of "robot parking cops" now on the market. They range in quality, he said, from well-designed and well-built machines to others having "more the appearance of the usual 69-cent alarm clock."

May Provide Revenue.

"Obviously, the installation of parking meters will not provide any additional parking space on the streets," he declared. "The use of meters, however, tends toward a more efficient and equitable use of the space available by discouraging overtime parking and may serve as an additional source of revenue. These would seem to be the principal advantages."

Bearce said municipal officials need have little fear that an appreciable number of drivers will drop slugs in the nickel slots, inasmuch as the coin—or slug—is clearly visible in the meter.

Introduced in Oklahoma City in July, 1935, there are now 30,000 parking meters in use throughout the country in cities ranging from 20,000 to 300,000 population. Washington will be the largest city to install them.

A recent report by the New York State Bureau of Municipal Information shows that parking meters reduce cruising of cars from 25 to 90 per cent, speed up traffic, and make parking space available to many more autos.

"The meters have regulated parking and reduced traffic congestion considerably," Bearce quoted the report. "The all-day parker is now using the free parking lots provided by the city or has moved farther from the downtown business section."

"Short-Inch" Bill Favored.

The Bureau of Standards study was launched at the request of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic of the District Government, which will select, install and supervise the meters.

Enactment of the House bill to standardize the American inch at 25.4 millimeters was recommended by Herbert B. Lewis, of the Brown & Sharpe Manufacturing Co. He said he is confident industry in general favors legal sanction of the new inch—shorter by two-millionths than the official inch adopted by Congress in 1866—which already is used by makers of precision instruments.

Although the 25.4 inch has been in service in this country for several years, the change should be made legal and official by Congress in order to put "our standards of length on a definite, permanent and legal basis and bring them into agreement with those that have been internationally adopted," the speaker said.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

By Scott Hart.

Paradox.

Of all men, the President has gone most out of his way to give employment to the employable and willing. The impulse has overtoned his Administration. And in this connection Harry G. Ritner, of the GAO and editor of the Washington Federal Bulletin, writes this column an interesting letter on an old thought he has turned over many times in his mind:

"The purpose of this letter is to acquaint you with the high esteem and respect I hold for our President. Let us look back to 1914. When a youngster attending the E. V. Brown public school out at Chevy Chase, my desire for spending change to attend baseball games was not always gratified by my parents.

"So, after school, I journeyed to the Chevy Chase Golf Club to caddy. At this time, I remember our President, who was then Assistant Secretary of the Navy, attired in a white shirt and white duck trousers, as one who golfed in a foursome with Naval officers. Time and again the now President aroused my young curiosity as to his reason for toting his own golf clubs. He always golfed with a small white canvas bag with not more than four clubs.

"To this day the writer has not learned the reason why Mr. Roosevelt carried his own golf bag. Shamewully, I now admit that my thoughts of the President were not very high back in 1914. But it strikes me now that he just wanted to carry his own bag, and did—notwithstanding that he and possibly one other member of the exclusive club were the only members who did not hire caddies.

"Indeed, his determination to do things without fear is emphasized today more than ever. His efforts to feed the needy citizens of this country are outstanding." (We don't think there's any significance in his determination to carry the golf bag back in 1914, any characteristic that reveals the inner man; he just wanted the exercise.)

Promotion Policy.

Labor Department Lodge 228, AFGE, has started hammering for a promotion-from-within policy in the department, adopting a full statement on the subject and passing it along to the director of personnel. The statement reads:

"For several years Labor Department Lodge 228 has been concerned with the policy of promotions from within the Department of Labor. We believe that a sound personnel policy of filling such vacancies should be established.

"Of special interest and importance to the employes is a definite and adequate plan of publicizing all vacancies, either actual or prospective. However, be believe that whenever a vacancy exists in any bureau of the department it should be announced in the first instance in the bureau affected, and if a qualified person is available in that bureau such person should be selected. In case no person in that bureau is qualified, then publication of the vacancy should be made in the other bureaus of the department.

"In making selections, we believe it should be the policy to advance employes already in the division, branch and bureau successively, passing over such employes only in case an employe from another division, branch or bureau is found to have greatly superior qualifications."

And the same group is anxious also to protect its physical hides. The lodge officers have been negotiating with the officials in charge of the building maintenance, seeking to correct the slippery condition of the corrridor ramp leading to the cafeteria. They have wangled an agreement to solve the hazard by installation of abrasive cement between the floor tiles . . . Otherwise, Agent 2-R wigwags:

The Government rate by airplane to Puerto Rico is $127; they could talk by telephone for three minutes to the same place for $11.25 . . . Uncle Sam has aided 100,000 needy students, at an average cost of $15 each, to attend college—it's called the FERA college fund . . . From January 1 to May of this year, the Social Security Board handled 9,000,000 checks . . . The Army's barracks are to be improved at a cost of $123,795,860, and will wipe out the temporary war barracks now being used . . . National Emergency Council goes to Budget Bureau effective June 30, 1938 . . . PWA press section has 18 positions at cost of $49,920 annually.

Goings-On.

I. D. R. A. Goings-On: Employes of the Interior Department and the Public Works Administration—recently merged into a bigger and better I. D. R. A.—will celebrate the 161st anniversary of the flag with a dance the evening of June 17, it is announced by the president, Stanley W. Crosthwait. The event will be held in the air-cooled cafeteria of the new Interior Building. It will be a costume affair, surrounded by many historical representations.

Bill to Modernize Zoning Act Under Fire at Hearings

Opponents of the bill to modernize the District zoning act of 1920 yesterday attacked a proposal that the revised zoning commission be authorized to terminate nonconforming uses as hearings were resumed before a sub-committee of the Senate District Committee.

Roger J. Whiteford, attorney for the Washington Real Estate Board, declared property values would be jeopardized by the proposed action.

Amendments designed to limit commission powers were offered by M. R. Walker, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and W. C. Magathan, of the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C.

Meanwhile, arguments on a petition for rezoning of a portion of the Sheridan Circle section will be heard by the zoning commission at 10 a. m. today.

Healing Power Of Church Cited By Judge Hill

Christian Science Can be Applied to Business, Says Lecturer.

A lecture on "Christian Science: The Law of Life Abundant," was given last night in Constitution Hall by Judge Frederick C. Hill, C. S. B., of Los Angeles, Calif., a member of the board of lectureship of the mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. He was introduced by Bernard C. Duncan, first reader of First Church. The lecturer said in part:

"The question is asked many times, 'Can I apply Christian Science to my business affairs?' The simplest answer is to ask yourself another question, 'Why not?' You have experienced physical healing. You have applied Christian Science as the law of God in many ways and have found healing and relief. You have had moments of clear vision that 'now I am the child of God,' so why not apply the same law in all your ways? You have a right to be engaged in a good business and to enjoy the returns therefrom.

"It is clear that fear, worry, uncertainty—the turbulent boiling in mortal consciousness—will clog the legitimate channels of trade and will hamper business success. It is also true that the consistent endeavor to discern and demonstrate the spiritual reality will clear the channels of trade and keep them open for harmonious results. By correct spiritual thinking you are about your Father's business.

"God, Mind, is omnipotent, all power. Mind is omniscience, all knowledge, truth, intelligence. God, Mind, is omnipresence, fills all place, all space, and so forth. Hence, as you demonstrate the presence of Divine Mind, you have at your command, at all times, and in all places, all of the resources of infinite power, truth, knowledge and intelligence. This clears the way of all erroneous deposits and your sense of business is definitely established upon a spiritual basis, and it will be harmoniously expressed in a right form."

Danville Worker Held On Bigamy Charge

Danville, Va., May 31.—Edgar Engene Prevatte, 32, textile worker is under arrest here charged with bigamy and will be tried next Saturday. He is alleged to have married Miss Mattie Hayes when he was already the husband of Miss Mattie Bledsoe.

Prevatte denied that he is a bigamist insisting that his first wife had received a final divorce.

Jewish Social Workers Place Job Hunts Ahead of Psychiatry

Conference Finds Recession Has Forced Change in Case Handling to Stress Practicalities of Finding Work for Idle Hands.

The practical business of finding jobs for idle hands today is more important than the study of what those hands and minds may do if they already are employed.

So, because of the economic crisis, it has become necessary for social case workers in many instances to place emphasis upon "vocational diagnosis and treatment," rather than upon the "psychiatric approach" in handling their clients, delegates to the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the National Conference of Jewish Social Welfare decided yesterday, as they concluded a six-day convention at the Willard Hotel.

Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, executive director of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, was elected president of the conference, succeeding Harry Greenstein, former head of public relief in Maryland and director of the Jewish Charities in Baltimore.

The conference also chose two vice presidents, Israel S. Chipkin, of the Jewish Education Association, of New York, and Isidore Sobeloff, executive director of the Jewish Welfare Federation of Detroit, while Joseph E. Beck, of Philadelphia, was re-elected treasurer and Moses W. Beckelman, of New York, secretary of the conference.

Three new members were named to the executive committee. They were Louis Kraft, of the National Jewish Welfare Board, and Harry L. Lurie, of the Council of Jewish Federation and Welfare Funds, both of New York, and Ben M. Selekman, of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, of Boston.

Buffalo, N. Y., will be the scene of the fortieth annual meeting, delegates decided.

Change in technique from rigid adherence to "the psychiatric approach" was indicated in several of the sessions of the conference.

"The impact of the economic crisis is making social workers cognizant of the need to emphasize economic adjustment services," Irwin Rosen, of the Federation Employment Service, said yesterday.

The gathering discussed at length methods whereby case workers in Jewish family welfare agencies might be most helpful to Jewish refugees from Germany.

The discussion was led by Mrs. Gertrude Ross Davis, executive director of the Jewish Family Welfare Society of Brooklyn.

Principal papers at this session were read by Miss Ruth Mann, of the Jewish Social Service Association, New York, and Miss Hannah Zeigler, of the Greater New York Co-ordinating Committee for German Refugees.

At your Service

"Yes . . . all three of us are at your service! My two partners here are fully as important as I am.

"I take real pride in keeping your car spic and span . . in seeing that your tires have the correct air pressure . . that you have enough water in your radiator and your battery.

"All these things are important to you. But the big thing you drive in for is the gas! And that's where my two partners come in.

"For 23 years Amoco-Gas has been famous for its smooth, 'pingless' acceleration, for its powerful, knock-free performance. It delivers its power so smoothly, so evenly that it eliminates destructive vibration . . keeps repair bills down. It's economical in another way, too — it gives you more miles on each filling. Then, there's Orange American Gas — a pure, 'sweet' petroleum product. Orange American is the best buy at regular gas price.

"My two partners give you the kind of service that really saves you money.

"So you see, here at Your Amoco Dealer . . . there are three of us at your service."

Both sides of the windshield and the rear window, too! Check oil, water, tires and battery . . . clean headlamp lenses. These little things are important to us—because they're important to you!

Here's something you can't get from anyone except us: Amoco-Gas and American Gas. We sell 'em because we know they're the best buys for the money!

Vast Waterway Plan Offered to Canada by Hull

Treaty

scenic beauty of Niagara Falls;

"Permit the Province of Ontario to go forward with its plans for diversion from the Albany river basin into the Great Lakes and utilize such additional water for power at Niagara;

"Make available considerable additional Niagara power to each country for development at will;

"Enable the proposed commission to proceed immediately with the preparation of comprehensive plans for more efficient use of the resources of the Niagara River."

May Import Power.

The treaty, of 11 articles, would distribute the waters of Niagara in order to insure unbroken crestlines on both the American and the Canadian falls, thereby preserving their beauty. The State of New York would be enabled to proceed immediately to develop 1,100,000 horsepower of electric power which, it was said, would cost less than $8 per horsepower.

The accompanying note said that if the power development of the American share of the International Rapids section is carried out, the United States will agree to importation of power from Canada, though previously the State Department had ruled against such importation on the grounds that concerns which had come to depend on the power might find it shut off in war time.

Railroads long have been outstanding opponents of the proposed development but Secretary Hull wrote:

"The period within which completion of the deep waterway would be contemplated would be sufficient to provide a natural growth of traffic, assuring the railroads the ability to adjust themselves to the new transportation agency without financial hardship."

Canada would agree, under the treaty, to deepen the New Welland ship canal and complete essential links in the Canadian section of the waterway, including deep canals in the Soulanges and Lachine areas in the St. Lawrence.

The quantity of water diverted for power in the International Rapids section is to be equally divided between the two countries.

Diversion of water from the Great Lakes system through the Chicago drainage canal is to be reduced by December 31 of this year to the quantity permitted by the Supreme Court decree of 1930—1,500 cubic feet per second; but it may be increased by agreement.

Additional diversions of 5,000 cubic feet of water per second are authorized for each of the two countries from the Niagara River above the falls, following the completion of the works contemplated by the treaty.

Commissoin to Rule.

An international basin commission composed of not more than ten members would have jurisdiction over all questions of development relating to the entire basin.

The State Department summary said:

"It has long been recognized that both the Niagara Falls and the international rapids sections have enormous possibilities. Deep-water navigation will meet cheap power. This will make possible the bringing together of Great Lakes iron ore, Canadian and American mineral resources and water-borne materials. Included in this is the possible development of the extremely rich and relatively undeveloped iron ore resources in New York State itself."

Hull's letter to the Canadian government recalled that he sent a memorandum to Ottawa on March 17 expressing the conviction of the United States Government "that the mutual needs of Canada and the United States could be best provided for through a jointly planned development of their extraordinary natural resources in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence basin."

Canada Delays Judgment.

Ottawa, May 31 (AP).—The Canadian government tonight withheld observation on the draft of a new Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterways treaty submitted by the United States Government.

The treaty was tabled in the House of Commons by Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe, acting as house leader.

Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King issued a statement saying:

"The note and the draft treaty have not been in the hands of the Canadian government long enough to justify the making of any detailed observations.

"The new proposals will be carefully studied and dealt with in due course, after the necessary consultation on the phases of the proposals which require provincial co-operation."

Reorganization Is Dropped By New Deal This Session

floor during desultory debate on the President's $3,247,000,000 recovery bill.

But House Majority Leader Rayburn, of Texas, was less optimistic. He said adjournment would come "sometime between June 11 and June 20 as it will take that long to clean up everything on the slate."

The House calendar is almost bare, with only the final deficiency appropriation bill to be whipped through at the last minute as routine business, but with the serious problem of the conference report on the wage-hour bill remaining.

Barkley, in an effort to press the omnibus relief-recovery measure more swiftly through the Senate, stated that 11 a. m. meetings will begin at once, with night sessions maintained until the Senate gets into high gear.

The wage-hour conferees, delayed by the illness of Representative Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, House Labor Committee chairman, will meet for the first time Thursday at 3:30 p. m., it was learned.

House conferees were named yesterday, including Chairman Norton, Representatives Ramspeck, Georgia; Keller, Illinois; Dunn, Pennsylvania, and Wood, Missouri (all Democrats), and Welch, California, and Hartley, New Jersey (Republicans).

The Senate, meanwhile, during a long afternoon of policical discussion, voted to make $50,000,000 of Works Progress Administration funds available for direct relief in emergency situations, but turned down an amendment proposed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, seeking to make this sum $150,000,000.

This emergency fund would be earmarked out of the $1,425,000,000 relief funds proposed in the recovery bill.

Vandenberg, in striving for the increase, declared that the large-city unemployment demands, intensified by the depression, constituted a "clear indication" that more direct relief (outright money grants, or the "dole,") is needed.

Action on the more controversial points of the huge spending bill was repeatedly postponed, with only minor amendments approved. After Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, sought to increase the $1,425,000,000 relief fund to $4,425,000,000—a straight $3,000,000,000 jump—action on the total WPA fund was set forward.

Another showdown was set for the future when Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, withdrew temporarily an amendment slashing $30,000,000 from certain Public Works Administration funds and devoting it instead to water conservation.

Frazier had offered the amendment on behalf of Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota. He withdrew it in order to consult with a number of conservative Democratic Senators who are waging a bitter-end battle to earmark funds throughout the measure.

Hours of vain wrangling marked each move in the Senate. Toward the close of the day, Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, endeavored to obtain unanimous consent to rushing through a rivers and harbors bill which has passed the House, a "pork barrel" measure authorizing the expenditure of an untotaled amount of money for construction, repair and preservation of numerous rivers and harbors projects.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, vigorously objected to Copeland's tactics, and indefinite postponement of the measure's consideration was obtained.

Debate on the Administration's money policy had featured earlier hours in the Senate, beginning with announcement by Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, that he would seek to amend the spending bill to provide a Congressional mandate to the Federal Reserve Board to stabilize prices by regulating the value of money.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, who had a field day of prodding Administration spokesmen, demanded that the Administration explain the operation of its $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund—the money set aside when the dollar was devalued for Treasury operations in the world's money markets to stabilize the dollar.

Wheeler contended that other nations still depreciated their currencies, resulting in an unfavorable trade balance in the United States of more than $1,000,000,000 last year—a burden which he said fell on the American farmer and laborer as well as on industry generally.

An amendment was introduced by Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, which would create a five-man Federal Unemployment Relief Board to administer all relief outside of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the PWA. The board, to be composed of three Democrats and two Republicans, would investigate Government relief activities and report to Congress next January.

The wild rumors floating about Congress of possible revival of Government reorganization measures began after the President's morning White House conference with Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama; Barkley and Rayburn.

Bankhead said that a "joint statement" would be issued today, but would give no hint of its contents. As speculation mounted, the leaders decided to make the announcement at once to quiet the fears that action would be sought now.

House D. C. Group To Study Loan Bill

A special meeting of the House District Committee has been called by Chairman Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, for 10:30 a. m. today to consider the commissioners' bill to amend the District PWA borrowing act.

The measure is the only important legislation remaining on the committee's agenda. As there will be no other District day this session, Palmisano probably will wait until the Senate passes the companion measure and then call it up in the House under unanimous consent.

If enacted into law, the bill will give the District heads authority to borrow $18,150,000 from the Public Works Administration and repay only 55 per cent of the loan over a period of 25 years on the same terms now allowed the States.

Falling Scaffold Hurts 2 Bystanders, Worker

Three persons were slightly injured yesterday when a scaffold collapsed at 1215 G street northwest. Two pedestrians, Mrs. Grace Irume, 34, Gaithersburg, Md., and Mrs. Doris Miller, 23, 315 Evarts street northeast, suffered slight cuts when struck by lumber. Charge Brown, 36, 517 A street southeast, was on the platform when it fell about four feet. His leg and ankle were bruised.

Auto 'Robbed.'

Large-Scale Slum Clearance.

The amendments to the alley dwelling act, now approved by both the House and Senate, will make possible for the first time a large-scale attack upon Washington's slums. Since November, 1934, the Alley Dwelling Authority has been at work purchasing land in the worst slum areas, razing insanitary shacks and redeveloping small sites in keeping with the character of each neighborhood. But its funds have been extremely limited.

A recent financial statement by the ADA shows that it has received $865,496 in appropriations and allocations of work relief funds. Revenue from its projects has amounted to $141,918, making a total of receipts slightly in excess of $1,000,000. Considering its enormous task of reclaiming 200 squares containing inhabited alleys, that is a meager sum.

The ADA has developed four housing projects at a total cost of $458,507. Not all of these dwellings have been designed to accommodate the very lowest income group. Yet the average over-all cost, including administrative expenses of the ADA, is $4,877 per family unit, despite the high cost of building here. Construction costs amount to an average of $4,027 per dwelling, far below the maximum fixed for cities of this size by the United States housing authority act.

With the meager funds available, however, the ADA has been able to house only 94 families in completed projects. One other development is now under way. Yet it is obvious that only a modest beginning has been made toward replacement of Washington's alley huts by an equivalent number of airy, sanitary, modern houses.

As soon as the ADA amendments are finally enacted it is assumed that the United States Housing Authority will make available loans for a number of new projects. Preliminary plans for such undertakings are understood to have been worked out in advance by the ADA. All that is needed is funds to transform breeding places for crime, disease and poverty into model low-cost residential developments.

This will not mean, of course, a frantic rush to clear the slums. The ADA has had plenty of time to establish a sound technique. Its experience has pointed the way toward practical and economical reclamation of decaying areas. In this connection it is interesting to note that revenues from its projects to date exceed by about $25,000 its administrative expenses, including project maintenance.

Hearty approval of the policies followed by the ADA may be seen in the sponsorship of that agency's amendments by President Roosevelt and their adoption by both houses of Congress without opposition. In these circumstances the different methods employed by the ADA and the USHA should prove no obstacle to the granting of ample funds by the Federal agency for continuation of slum clearance work here.

Exorcising War.

The utter confusion which characterizes so much American thinking on the problem of war and how to avoid it is well illustrated by two current developments.

One is the favorable report which the Senate Military Affairs Committee has given to a measure designed to draft private wealth in wartime through a system of forced loans. In behalf of this the committee asserts that:

> When the financial tycoons and the large manufacturers realize that they will have to lend the bulk of the money necessary to finance the next war at an extremely low rate of interest, they will hesitate to use the forces at their command to propagandize the general public into a war hysteria.

The assumption behind this seems to be that the chief threat of war, so far as the United States is concerned, is to be found in undefined machinations by our own economic royalists. It would follow that if only these sinister elements are sternly warned to behave, the dove of peace will continue to float buoyantly over the Star-Spangled Banner.

That the United States might possibly become involved in war as a result of external pressures and despite the opposition of financiers and industrialists, the great majority of whom have little to gain and everything to lose by war, apparently does not occur to the Senate committee. It prefers the lighter mental exercise involved in exorcising the specter of war by incantations of the medicine man variety.

There are others whose approach to the problem of war and peace is equally idealistic and equally ineffective. At the recent National Anti-War Congress here a group of high-minded individuals passed a whole series of well-intended resolutions. Some of these, it is reported, demanded a complete ban on the export of arms and munitions, in time of peace as well as in time of war. Yet with equal enthusiasm the delegates also approved a resolution condemning the Administration for placing an embargo on the shipment of arms to Spain. This is found contrary to a treaty, apparently the only treaty the delegates bothered to investigate.

It would avoid embarrassing contradictions; it would be much simpler and every bit as effective, if the Senate Military Affairs Committee and the Anti-War Congress would combine on a brief bill making it unconstitutional for any foreign country ever to threaten the peace of the United States.

A Choice Of Evils.

The important differences between the House and Senate wage-hour bills make the task of the conference committee extremely difficult. The House bill sets rigid standards of minimum wages and maximum hours and leaves the enforcement of these mandatory standards to the Department of Labor. No new administrative body has been set up because, the House Committee on Labor explains, the provisions of the bill are "not of a nature to require continuous administration and supervision."

The Senate bill, on the other hand, aims at flexibility within certain prescribed limits. Wide discretionary powers would be given to a proposed jurisdictional board to determine what wages and hours should be set for regulated industries.

There are really two main issues for the conference committee to consider, as Senator Borah pointed out yesterday: that of wage differentials and of the administrative enforcement machinery. With characteristic eclecticism, Mr. Borah calls for retention of wage differentials and rejection of the administrative board. But what is needed is not simply statutory differentials in minimum rates of pay so much as provision for flexible adjustments of standards not merely along sectional lines but by industries and classes of workers. To achieve that sort of flexibility, it is essential that wide discretionary powers shall be conferred on an administrative agency.

If we are fearful of bestowing powers, called "Hitler-like" by Senator Borah, then we should refuse to consider Hitleresque types of legislation that would substitute official wage decrees for uncoerced economic adjustments. We should resist Federal invasion of a field of industrial regulation which properly belongs to the States.

Viewed solely from the economic standpoint, the arguments in favor of the Senate plan of regulation seem unassailable. Indirect confirmation of their superiority is afforded by the poll of the Institute of Public Opinion published today. Over 60 per cent of those voting declared in favor of geographical differentials in minimum wage rates, although more support for the flat rate provisions of the House bill was found in New England than elsewhere. The widespread belief that New England would benefit by a uniform minimum is itself an argument against such uniformity. For it reflects a conviction that Southern industry would be competitively weakened by this kind of regulation.

Whatever the ultimate desirability of eliminating sectional differences in wage rates at the lowest levels, the fact has to be faced that today those differences are pronounced. To some extent, they are justified by differences in living costs. But regardless of such considerations, sub-standard wage rates cannot be suddenly raised without danger of serious economic maladjustment. The problem of regulation can only be met "without disturbance and dislocation of business and industry," as the Senate bill desires, by making constant exceptions to the general rules established for administrative guidance.

Both House and Senate bills are open to attack on constitutional grounds in view of their loose definitions of interstate commerce. Moreover, there is room for constant litigation about the character of employments "in and affecting commerce" which might be properly subject of Federal regulation. Each bill also has its own specific constitutional weaknesses, in addition to these common ones.

In short, for many reasons the conferees may be said to face a choice of evils in deciding between the regulatory principles embodied in the two bills before them. The Senate bill, however, is the one less likely to create serious economic disturbances. The chief advantage of the House bill is that its unworkability would be so quickly demonstrated as to make probable a speedy repeal.

The Tax On Milk.

Rumors that an increase in the price of milk is contemplated because of the business privilege tax appear to be unfounded. It is obvious, however, that this concealed sales tax will put a burden on milk producers as well as distributors. And in one way or another that will work to the disadvantage of consumers, even if it merely prevents a reduction in the present price of this essential food.

Congress adopted the business privilege tax in preference to an income tax that would have been adjusted to the ability of each citizen to pay. The effect of this action ought to be clearly understood by District residents as well as by members of Congress who voted against the income levy without adequately considering the present alternative. Under the act finally approved milk, an essential food for poor and rich alike, is taxed three times. First the producer must pay, then the distributor, and finally the store, in the case of milk sold over the counter.

Producers estimate that they will have to pay $50,000 per year. Distributors' taxes under the same levy are placed at $100,000, and stores handling milk will probably have to pay $50,000 more. That is a heavy tax upon an essential item in children's diet. Whether milk prices are raised or whether a decrease is prevented, consumers will ultimately bear a considerable part of this burden without regard for their ability to pay.

The Court Replies.

With only Justice Black dissenting, the Supreme Court has delivered a sharp rebuke to Solicitor General Jackson and Secretary Wallace. To Mr. Jackson's accusation that the court had reversed itself in the Kansas City Stock Yards Decision a flat denial is returned. Yesterday's refusal of the Administration's petition for a rehearing of this case is evidence that the court intends to pursue a policy of independent judicial action, despite the threats against it.

Last week The Post pointed out that both Secretary Wallace and Solicitor General Jackson had apparently misunderstood the opinion of the court in the Kansas City case. The decision yesterday leaves no doubt of this. Mr. Wallace had insisted that the mistake in the hearing procedure criticized by the court was "the lack of an examiner's report available to the parties for exceptions and argument." In ruling on the same case two years ago, he said, the court had found such a report unnecessary. In the recent decision he understood the court to require such procedure.

But a careful reading of the April 25 decision was sufficient to show the error of that view. It was plainly evident, even to laymen, that the court had in no way reversed its previous opinion. The decision two years ago merely sent the case back to the district court with instructions to ascertain whether the Secretary of Agriculture had made independent findings and whether a fair hearing had been granted. When additional testimony was taken it was apparent that the Secretary had accepted, in modified form, the findings of the experts who prosecuted the case for the Government, and had denied the plaintiffs an opportunity to be heard upon those findings.

Secretary Wallace has contended that the failure to grant a fair hearing was no fault of his own but stemmed rather from the fact that no examiner's report was issued by the previous Administration. The court now emphatically asserts: "Our decision was not rested upon the absence of an examiner's report." Rather the full weight of the faulty procedure falls upon the present Secretary of Agriculture for his failure to accord the aggrieved commission men a hearing after the contentions of the department had been clearly defined.

So far as the Department of Agriculture is concerned the court's ruling did not seem to raise any vital procedural issue. Secretary Wallace had already corrected the procedure in administering the Packers and Stock Yards Act. But the April 25 decision was sharply attacked by Solicitor General Jackson in the interest of other New Deal administrative agencies. In contending that the Kansas City case had been "wrongly decided" he, in effect, denounced the requirements of a fair hearing broadly outlined by the court.

The last word may not have been heard in this controversy. Fortunately, however, the position of the court is unmistakably clear. And the decision of yesterday is too forthright to encourage expectation that it will be changed. Further assault upon that position would be as "unwarranted" as the court defines the contentions in Mr. Jackson's petition.

In a period when regulatory agencies are multiplying rapidly the courts afford the chief safeguard of the public against administrative absolutism. It is of the utmost importance that these powerful boards and commissions be held to the requirements of fair play. The constructive reaction to the rebuke which the Supreme Court has administered would be establishment by law of more systematic administrative procedure.

There might be such a thing as "the age of discretion," but no one has ever lived long enough to reach it.

War Costs In Peacetime.

From the New York Post.

What international tension and bitterness mean in Europe can be gathered from the recent Daladier tax decree. At one stroke, the already mountainous French taxes were increased 8 per cent.

That means all the taxes, such as income levies, with which we are familiar, and a host of other taxes, such as the national taxes on dogs, radios and unfurnished apartments that we haven't had to consider.

National defense becomes more and more the dominant note of national economic life even in democratic France. If there is a proposal to shorten the work week, it is opposed on the ground that France must speed up her industries in order to bolster the national defense.

If there is a move to increase wages, it is found that the interests of the national defense are contrary to higher wages. There is not a governmental problem which is not tested in relation to its bearing on the military strength of the nation.

Such complete integration of economic and political life around one function of government is, of course, inevitable in wartime. But the present bristling peace has created almost wartime conditions.

One of the greatest hidden war dangers in Europe is that the armament burdens of "peace" will become so intolerable that war will no longer appear catastrophic in comparison.

On Taxing Churches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler recently criticized as "political" the objections made by religious organizations to legalized gambling, and suggested that they should therefore be subject to taxation under the present income tax law.

Mr. Pegler has done a service in thus pointing out an inequity of the present income tax law and the danger lurking in it. There is real danger that a religious organization or its spokesmen who may happen to express views different from these at the moment dominant in the Government may may be severely penalized for so doing.

Mr. Pegler dislikes certain views of certain churches. His policy would equally injure those religious bodies who gave support to the views which he champions. Mr. Pegler, like many others who call themselves liberal, needs to learn that liberalism applies also to those with whom you disagree, as the late Justice Holmes insisted.

Nominee For Commissioner.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A news item in The Post tells about a "Locher-for-Commissioner boom" with the possible "backing of the A. F. of L. trade unionists. This indeed, would be an innovation, but a very desirable one.

John Locher's record for integrity, for fairness in dealing with all groups speaks for itself. He is an able man and would furnish the labor viewpoint so much needed in District affairs. He has had administrative and practical experience and is a "self-made" man. He has balance and good judgement as he has demonstrated.

The attitude that only the propertied class should be represented on the Board of Commissioners is not a social one at all. We need a broadening of the base in governmental conceptions and administration. Land, labor and capital create all wealth, and, by the same token, they should share in government.

Other governing bodies such as the Board of Education, the social welfare groups and those handling District affairs should also have a representative of organized labor to help them come to wise and practical solutions of the complex problems that constantly arise. Such an attitude is justified by the splendid record of union labor in the District of Columbia. Union labor has been successful in handling its own problems and would, no doubt, be useful in helping administer civic problems of a wider scope.

Here, at least, is something to think about. ARISTOTLE.

"Country Club Churches."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From a brief broadcast of Roger W. Babson's address as moderator of the Congregational Church in which he diagnosed present day religion and branded some churches as "Country Clubs," it is difficult to know exactly what was in the speaker's mind which he wished to convey to the minds of his hearers, and what he may have suggested as a needed reform.

One of your correspondents May 23 intimated that religious leaders advocated going back to the "old-fashioned religion" but that there can be no progress in going back.

If by old-fashioned religion is meant a positive but emotional religion mixed with considerable superstition and error, your correspondent is right. Going back to that would be retrogression and not progress. They that worship God "must worship him in spirit and in truth." The Father seeks intelligent worship from rational beings, created in his own image. Christ endorsed the more intelligent worship of the Jews versus the less scripturally informed worship of the Samaritans. Our church leaders do not wish to go back to a religion of that type. The youth of the church would instinctively revolt and the church can not grow without recruits from their ranks. There is a sense, however, in which the church needs to go back in order to go victoriously forward.

What did Mr. Babson mean in speaking of some churches as "Country Clubs?" Did he not mean to remind the Christian public that we are living in an intensely pleasure seeking age? The avenues of legitimate and wholesome pleasures in which many church members have become passionately absorbed, have greatly multiplied the last quarter of a century so as to leave little time or strength for the real business of the church. It is "pleasure before business," throwing in reverse the old motto "business before pleasure." "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." "Having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof."

Mr. Babson seems to be on Scriptural ground in his diagnosis of the church. Our leading Christian diagnosticians are in agreement with him. The church needs to go back to first principles in order to go successfully forward in its great mission. GERRIT SNYDER.

Imports and Exports.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent letter to The Post, "Facts and Figures" says: To state that it is profitable in the long run to buy more than one sells is preposterous." Perhaps so, but not so preposterous as to apply that statement to merchandise trade with one other country.

Does "F & F" buy more from his grocer than he sells to him?

Does he know that the United Kingdom for decades has bought more than it has sold?

Does he know that Bermuda in 1937 spent $10,600,000 for imports and sold only $157,000 worth of exports?

Just how preposterous are the British and the Bermudans?

Monastery Confiscations.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: A recent news report of "the confiscation of the entire property of the Monastery of St. Lambrecht" and the sealing of the treasury of the Monastery of Mariazell by the Austrian state police recalls an editorial appearing in Scribner's Monthly more than half a century ago, April 1874, to be exact.

The editorial said in part: ". . . Church property has called for, and insisted on, the protection of the state, while not lifting the burdens of the state by one of its fingers. There have been brotherhoods of beggars, in the name of religion, who ceased to be producers, and self-supporters, and defenders of the state. What wonder that the state has ocassionally scattered them? The state must live, and when a church absolutely sucks into itself all its sources of revenue, what is left but taxation or destruction?"

A Business View Of Pump-priming

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this letter I propose to establish, in a logical way, that pump-priming, as a means of curing the present evils, is doomed to failure before it even starts.

The avowed purpose of pump-priming is so to stimulate business generally that business will take hold and carry on the stimulation to ultimate complete recovery.

It is generally admitted that one of the principal factors in delaying recovery is the fear and distrust of the New Deal that is felt by business, especially big business; and it has come to be a sort of axiom that unless big business prospers no business prospers.

In view of the importance which the Administration attaches to pump-priming, one would naturally suppose that it would be given a clear track ahead. Just ordinary common sense would appear to dictate that.

Secretary Ickes is reported to have said that the peak of pump-priming will come next year. Let us consider some of the dangers, present or prospective, that threaten to continue the fear and uncertainty felt by business and come into headlong collision with pump-priming.

Take the President's message of April 29 on the subject of the strengthening and enforcement of antitrust laws. A reading of that will give anybody acquainted with business affairs some realization of the tremendous business anxieties and disturbances that would follow adoption of the President's views. A resolution for an investigation under the President's message is now pending in Congress. The unsettlement and alarm which these matters promise to develop next year, if the President's political strength continues, are bound to collide with the pump-priming efforts.

Then there are the recent indictments, under the present antitrust laws, of the heads of the largest automobile manufacturing companies, the trials of which will probably come during the pump-priming. My impression is that there is no moral turpitude in these cases and that when all the facts come to be known the prosecution will be a boomerang and additional evidence of hostility to big business.

The hostility of the Administration to utilities is illustrated in its unwillingness, up to this writing, to accept a provision in the lending-spending bill to give fair treatment to those private concerns whose facilities are threatened with duplication by Government grants and loans to municipalities.

Then there are the threats to private utilities possible in the areas of the TVA and the big western dams, and the many harmful possibilities under the celebrated "death-sentence" law.

Congress, having become convinced that business recovery has been retarded by the controversial tax impositions to which the President seems to cling as a matter of principle, has just passed a tax bill relieving business, to a large extent, from these impositions, but the President has refused to approve the bill and it has become law without his approval. The indications are that the Administration's fight against this congressional action will be resumed in the next session of Congress, notwithstanding the claim of business generally that the attitude of the Administration on these forms of taxation has been one of the principal causes of the present depression.

Increased taxation is regarded as inevitable during the next year or so as the result of the New Deal policies, although the taxation of business is almost unbearable now.

The railroad situation is almost certain to result next year in a large number of bankruptcies. This situation is likely to cause very heavy losses to banks, insurance companies and other institutions carrying immense amounts of railroad securities.

The wage-and-hour legislation, urged by the Administration and claimed by many opponents as destructive to many small businesses, is practically certain to cause much unsettlement and many disturbing adjustments during the progress of the pump-priming.

Labor, encouraged by the New Deal's attitude, is likely to cause much disturbance of business during the next year.

Business has also to fear the possibility of a special session of Congress this fall to advance the New Deal's views. It has also to fear the possibility of the election to Congress this fall of an increased number of radicals.

Altogether, there promises to be, during the period of pump-priming, such a crop of developments unfavorable and alarming to business, as to jeopardize, if not entirely frustrate, the normal effects of the pump-priming.

In view, therefore, of the evident determination of the Administration to insist on alleged reforms regardless of recovery, it would seem the part of wisdom to divert a large part, or all, of the proposed appropriations for PWA (pump-priming) to the increased relief expenditures that undoubtedly will be required.

Lament.

I DON'T think, for instance, that it's radishes that bloom in the spring, tra-la, and experience has gotten me beyond the point of naivete where one supposes that what is described on the package as a hardy annual will do very nicely in Ellicott street soil. Nothing—and I say it forlornly, but not with bitterness—nothing will do very nicely in any soil this side of Maple avenue in Bethesda; and even the farmers of that neighborhood raise more wild grass than roses, though they'll deny it. At least, veracity and clear thinking thrive on Ellicott street.

I mean by all that only this, that it must be clear to anyone that I'm quite a gardener. I like, as a matter of fact, to think of myself as a farmer. I don't see why not. After all, I have two lots inclosed by a white picket fence, and out in Los Angeles, long famous for the justness of perspective characteristic of its inhabitants, that would be called a ranch. Out there I would be known as a rancher; yes, a rancher.

So, really, I think I may call myself a farmer, especially since in only seven more years we're going to be in position to buy a farm, one of the more rural sort, with moo-cows and donald ducks. And as a farmer I claim the privilege of being interested in the weather. I think the most significant thing about being a farmer is the mental attitude. No trills. Keep out Danish butter and Wall Street is the ruination of the country and how's the weather? No irrelevancies, like bright young men and WPA murals and the imagery of Hart Crane. Chiefly the weather.

So I've been practicing up on my mental attitude, which, as I've said, is the essential thing about successful farming. Every morning before breakfast I go out on the front porch to have a look at the weather. To be entirely accurate, I go out to bring in the milk and morning paper (because my wife is still in her pajamas). But I conceive that my chief concern is the weather. I sniff thoughtfully and look at the sky and wonder how all this is going to affect my crops. Of course, crops is only a piece of idle sarcasm out here on Ellicott street; but the spirit of the proposition remains: if something should grow, how would this weather affect it?

In that thought, I feel, I achieve a proper realism, a hard-headedness that smacks of the soil. I feel possessed of a firmness of mind, of a calmness, a silent depth that bespeak the rustic philosopher, the only truly wise man. I weigh with deliberateness the feel, the smell, the look of the weather, and by the time I have the milk bottle by the neck I have reached deep conclusions.

I go in then to compare notes with another great farmer, the editor of my favorite morning paper (you know the one). This man's zeal for our true vocation leads him to print each morning in a very conspicuous place what apparently we both believe the day's most important news, the predictions of the weather man.

For years I have marveled at that great mind. Such accuracy as he achieves bespeaks, I feel, an acuteness of insight, a soundness of judgment, a sensitivity of perception that leave me breathless; and I am invaded by a religious awe when I think that he is devoting his life to the cause, forsaking all things else.

But of late I wonder . . . Is infirmity overtaking this gigantic intellect? Or are perhaps he and my favorite editor leagued in a puerile plot to confuse me?

For a month now, Mr. Weatherman, you have been predicting rain, and for a month it has rained. But lo, your predictions! One day you say rain and the next day showers. If you look back on the list of your predictions you'll find they have a monotonous cadence, rain and warmer, showers and colder, showers, rain, rain, showers. But I don't think it's your style with which I quarrel.

At first you managed to intrigue me by the distinction apparently to be made between rain and showers; and at first I was dismayed by my inability to grasp it. When you said showers, it, as far as I could see, just rained; and I was overcome by my inadequacy. But when you said rain, again it just rained and the water came down on the Nation's farmers in the same manner, with the same force, with an equal wetness. And there's the matter. As far as I'm concerned, Mr. Weatherman, that's just quibbling. I feel compelled to warn you that such tactics will only alienate your devoted following. Already I'm beginning to hear murmurs: Why doesn't the guy say fair and warmer once in a while?

M. GARRET NEALON.

Liberty's Note.

The symphonic overture "1776" will have its world premiere at Bad Orb, Germany, on the Fourth of July. A dominant note in the opus is Liberty Bell's ring, scaled at C by the American composer, Charles Flick-Steger, who spent long hours in Philadelphia to determine the correct pitch.

Well, why not? Music hath charms and, being the universal language, it may have a faintly familiar if not exactly pleasing sound on Nazi ears.

Whether or not the "1776" piece is destined to live as another "1812 Overture," Composer Flick-Steger ought to bring it back to America after its European debut to see if it would mean anything when played at meetings of the Bund or at Union Square.

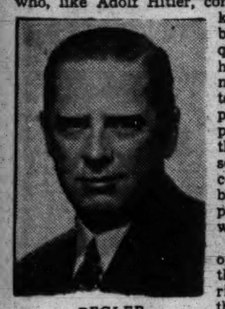
What The Shouting Is For.

NOBODY CAN seriously object to a President's expression of a desire for Senators and Congressmen who will do as he orders. If the President is a man who, like Adolf Hitler, considers himself to be all-knowing, then he is only being consistent and, in a queer way, honest, when he asks for a purely nominal legislature, committed beforehand to every proposal which he may present. What he asks, in that case, is absolute personal power to pack the courts and influence the ballot by blanket appropriations of billions with which to buy votes.



PEGLER.

If a President has that opinion of himself and that ambition, it is his right to address the voters through his stooges, or even directly under his own name, with an appeal that he be made supreme. Other dictators abolish legislatures entirely, but each to his own whim, and an American President-dictator might prefer to preserve the form. If he were 100 per cent successful in his appeal, however, the preservation of the form would represent a great unnecessary expense.

Knowing that any White House bill would have the effect of a decree, he might, in the interests of economy, efficiency and speed, devise a bank check "Aye" to be autographed by each member at the start of each session, and then send them all home and apply that indorsement to all his commands. Multiply Minton, of Indiana, and Pepper, of Florida, by a sufficient number and that would be the character of the United States Congress.

• • • •

IT IS idle to argue that a President does wrong to ask the people to give him such powers, disguising the appeal in the form of White House indorsement in support of individual candidates. He is within his right, but it is then up to the people to analyze his request and his motives, weigh the effects and decide whether they want to abandon their accustomed form of government, give up the struggle for their rights and yield to the will of one man, augmented, perhaps, by schemes purred in his ear by members of a secret political household, including some reckless and mischievous individuals with an ambition to become world-shakers.

There is legitimate objection, however, against the use of Government money, the people's own money, to buy this power from them at the polls. This is the point that is purposely ignored in all the arguments in favor of President Roosevelt's interference in State politics. There were those who, in the beginning of the New Deal, were cynical enough to suggest that a President with billions at his disposal would not always hew to the line of human needs in spending that money, but would yield to the temptation to use it to buy further authority. That seemed utterly unthinkable then, for the people had religion at the time, and the country did not know Mr. Roosevelt very well. Nevertheless, this was predicted, and the predictions have been borne out.

• • • •

SINCE THEN, succor has become a political work, and Harry Hopkins, the greatest individual employer in the country, has dropped a hint to the dependent voters of Iowa, which may be interpreted as an admonition to vote right. A similar hint from Henry Ford to his employes would be considered outrageous, and might cause him to be yanked up. It is the sort of hint which has been denounced by New Dealers as vicious arrogance in the case of private employers except that in this case the warning amounts to a vote-buying proposition very thinly disguised. Senators and Congressmen who do not obey the President's decrees will be fought by a campaign fund taken out of the public treasury.

That is what all the shouting is for. It isn't that a President must keep a still tongue in his head and pretend to be impartial in State elections. But no man ever should have been given such vote-buying power and the power should never be placed in any man's hands again.

That money can never buy the people anything one-half so precious as what they are asked to sell.

Gas Mask Shortage.

("Prague: Czechoslovakia's supply of gas masks for babies has been almost exhausted. The gas mask stores have been crowded for weeks."—News Item.)

The war gods chuckled merrily
And gave a lusty shout
For they'd received the news that masks
For babes were running out.

Their sides they shook like gelatin
As Mars himself did roar,
"Their children's masks are getting low—
There soon will be no more!"

Mars laughed until I thought he'd choke;
He leaped about with joy;
"They're short," he cried, "of gas masks for
The little girl and boy!"

I never saw him pleased so much—
So free from any blues;
"No gas masks for the babes," he laughed;
"What could be sweeter news!"

For grown-ups there are masks enough,
He read, but didn't care;
"What pleases me," he said, "is that
The babes won't get their share!"

He watched the crowds besiege the stores,
A sparkle in his eye;
He knew the infants would not have
An adequate supply.

It saddened him to find enough
To fit the adults all.
But how it cheered him up to know
So many babes would fall!

He didn't like to see equipped
The grown-ups, one by one,
But he was overjoyed to feel
The children might have none!

He chuckled as he flashed the news
To dictators he knew
Would be so pleased to know that gas
Masks for the kids were few.

He told some modern generals
And heard their lusty cheers;
It meant less trouble slaughtering
The helpless little dears!

The bombers of too many lands
Cried, "Boy, is this a break!
We hope the shortage is quite real
And not a big mistake!"

• • • •

Then Mars turned white, his hair on end—
Astounded, scared and grim;
How craven was he when he found
There wasn't one for him!

Europe On The Brink

Decisive Action By Democracies In Czechoslovakian Crisis Saved Day For Peace, Says Observer, But Outlook Remains Stormy.

By Europax.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

AFTER HANGING dizzily poised for a day or two on the brink of disaster, on the very verge of war, Europe has drawn back. Pulled up short by a last-minute realization that another step would have meant a fatal plunge over the precipice, the nations pause and reflect. But they have not yet turned resolutely back toward peace. They are still maneuvering dangerously near the treacherous edge of the cliff.

Thanks to an eleventh-hour resurrection of the democracies—Britain, France and Czechoslovakia—peace has been dragged back to safety for the moment. For the first time the dictators—Hitler in particular—have been checked by the firm stand of the European democracies.

This is the essential significance of the crisis over Czechoslovakia. World peace hung in the balance that week-end of the Czechoslovakian elections, no less than in the last days of July, 1914. Happily, history did not repeat itself. The British government hammered home to Berlin's reluctant diplomatic ears a timely warning not to make the same mistake twice. Hitler hesitated, and war was averted, at least temporarily.

Precisely because Europe's present respite is only temporary, I do not refrain from emphasizing—even dramatizing—this aspect of the situation. It cannot be too plainly understood that the democracies have proved unmistakably their ability to restrain the war-like propensities of the totalitarian states, and that this success will only be temporary unless the democratic countries of Europe, backed by the United States, remain united, calm and diligently watchful.

The Czechoslovakian crisis is not yet over. The big question persists. Can the tension between Prague and Berlin be entirely removed so long as Czechoslovakia retains its independence? In other words, can Hitler be satisfied with any compromise settlement, and if not, can he be curbed without war?

Britain's Attitude Different From 1914.

UNDERLYING this query is the deeper problem: Can Europe hope for peace without submission to the supremacy of the totalitarian powers? Can the democratic countries impose and maintain peace in the face of the Fascist challenge?

The recent—or rather the current—contest between Berlin and Prague is of the highest importance because it furnishes the first real response to these questions. The answer may not be conclusive as yet, but it is clear.

There are three elements in this answer. One is the calm force of the Czech democracy's will to remain free. The second is France's unshakable decision to support Prague's independence. The third is Britain's readiness to throw the whole weight of its diplomatic influence into the breach to prevent war from breaking out over the issue.

It is almost universally admitted that the British government could have prevented the war in July, 1914, if it had made clear to Germany that England could not remain neutral if France were attacked. Now, there is no question of Germany attacking France; the problem is more complex, because a German move against Czechoslovakia might force the French to attack the Reich in fulfillment of the Franco-Czech pact. Hitherto, Berlin has been convinced that, under those conditions, London would refuse to go to war over Central Europe, and that Paris, thus deprived of the assurance of English support, would likewise stop short of going to war in defense of Czechoslovakia.

From now on, however, it will be difficult for the Germans to adhere to this view. The situation is no longer the same, as the recent events in central Europe proved.

France Determined To Aid Czechoslovakia.

THE FACT is that the Czechs themselves have put a different face on things by their calm courage and determination. So long as they continue unwavering in this solid stand for their own independence their case is by no means hopeless.

The crux of the matter is simply this: The French will not fight for Czechoslovakia, any more than the British will. But France will most certainly fight with Czechoslovakia once she is convinced that Czech resistance is serious.

It can be stated authoritatively that the French general staff is very definite on this point. In fact, the general staff informed the French government, just prior to the visit of Premier Edouard Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet to London, that if Germany were allowed to swallow up Czechoslovakia as it did Austria, then French security could no longer be assured. The German bloc—Italy included—would then be stronger, for the first time in post-war history, than the Franco-British bloc, according to the calculations of the French military authorities.

In London Daladier defended this viewpoint so stubbornly and so well that he finally wrung from the unwilling British premier a promise that if a crisis occurred, England would at once warn Berlin of the danger of starting a general war from which Britain could not remain aloof even for a moment. Loyally, Neville Chamberlain carried out this promise immediately when there were reports of German troop movements toward the Czech frontiers.

There is little doubt today that this quick action saved the day. Germany was carrying out concentrations of troops. Czechoslovakia, far from yielding supinely as had Austria, likewise moved troops up to the German and Polish frontiers, and mobilized one or two classes of conscripts. France, quietly and almost unnoticed, got everything in readiness for general mobilization, but wisely avoided anything provocative. On the contrary, both France and Britain ostentatiously urged Prague to go as far as possible in the path of concessions to the German minority without capitulating to Hitler.

Game By No Means Entirely Won Yet.

THIS COMBINATION of moderation and firmness, of calm and of efficient readiness to act if forced to do so, had the desired effect. For the first time, Nazi Germany found itself facing calm strength, the strength of the oft-derided democracies.

For once, then, the democratic powers successfully called the bluff of the dictators—both of them; for Mussolini had agreed to stand aside and leave Hitler free to settle the Czechoslovakian affair. Furthermore, it is not altogether certain that America does not deserve a little of the credit for this diplomatic victory. Ambassador Bullitt, in Paris, had canceled a trip to London and was in constant contact with the Quai d'Orsay as well as by phone with Washington during that decisive week-end.

But the game is not won yet. The democracies were able to preserve peace in that instance because they were not divided on the issue. Over the Spanish affair, on the contrary, they are not united, either among themselves, nor within their borders. France especially is split over Spain, and the dictators know this. They will attempt to exploit these divisions. They will continue to attempt to separate France from Britain, and Czechoslovakia from both.

The outlook is still stormy, therefore, and the need for vigilance by the peace-loving democracies greater than ever. The fact remains, however, that one important victory for peace has been won by the democratic powers. If the lesson of this triumph is thoroughly learned and heeded, Europe can still avoid going over the brink of war.

Capt. Nathan Post, 1918 Naval Hero, Dies in California

A native of Fonda, Iowa, he was executive officer of the battleship Minnesota when she struck a mine off the Delaware coast in the World War.

After the armistice he completed the senior course at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

Later, while in command of the cruiser Detroit, he received letters of commendation for highest merit in battle efficiency, for greatest improvement in engineering and for highest merit in communication efficiency.

Maj. Jacob Resigns.

The War Against Disease.

IN "THE FIGHT FOR LIFE," Paul deKruif continues his now considerable series of books which bring, often dramatically, always intensely, the truth about science, its discoveries and their application to the lives of men everywhere. For the second time, the Book-of-the-Month Club has chosen a volume of his. It would be well if every volume he has written were assured of such a large first printing. It would be worth even taking a few pennies off the cost of one of our new battleships to subsidize and spread this information about what medical and research men and women are doing to keep the race going—the human race, instead of armament race. For, by such books as this (most or all of it came out earlier in the form of magazine articles) the public may be made to understand that health is a public matter and concerns us all. On an economic basis alone, this must be grasped if new knowledge is to be pressed into service on a large scale.

• • • •

SPECIFICALLY, THIS LATEST BOOK, after a vivid introduction (which tells of pellagra, the starvation disease) takes up separately and quite exhaustively for lay readers four subjects: death caused by childbirth, of which the proportion remains shockingly high; infantile paralysis, still the mystery disease insofar as the microbe has not been isolated; tuberculosis, no less a menace today because we are familiar with its ravages; syphilis, now made more prominent because it is being attacked openly and without hindrance from supposed moral uplifters.

In each section, he pursues the method of short history: discovery, etiology, diagnosis, treatment, bringing in the men who have given their lives to a particular investigation or experiment, often with danger to themselves. These men scarcely ever are receivers of gratitude or publicity, doubtless because they are insiders in an esoteric pursuit, and, also, because they themselves do not actually care whether or not they are known. Data on each disease, its killing power, the present methods of fighting it, contribute a contemporary potency to this exciting narrative; exciting, that is, if like deKruif, you believe in the saving of human life, no matter how insignificant that life may appear in its lower reaches.

We learn what the profession is doing to destroy the power of death; what method is best for the prevention of childbirth fever, and how the Chicago Maternity Center functions with amazing success in its production of babies amid the worst squalor, the filthiest slums of the city. We learn what drug has come into use locally as the barrier against the contagion of infantile paralysis, after years of experiment on monkeys and years of seeing each new hope vanish as the monkeys, supposedly immune, reacted just as violently and died just as rapidly as the rest.

The economic approach worked; when people saw that it cost money to have disease in the community, they were more than ready to go after the bugs in any way suggested by the authorities. And lastly, we hear of the new fever therapy in the treatment of syphilis, a mechanical fever in place of the malaria, first used by Wagner-Jauregg in his bold attack by means of inoculation with the germs of the one disease to combat the germs of the first. He found later that it was not the bacillus that was the fighter, but the heat of the fever which the bug produced.

DeKRUIF GOES A STEP FARTHER than straight narrative; in fact, several steps. He still drives home his thrusts against the tory medical profession and its inner temple from which has come so much of the negativism which confronts new discovery, new method. The liberals of the profession have long since accepted most of his blasts, partly because they were irrefutable. Now, he stresses above all the shortage of money to carry out on any correct scale the results of what has been learned through the years of research and experiment. This lack of funds is the great stultifier of the new knowledge of saving life, preventing serious illness, or striking it down in its early stages. The economic element is always present, at both ends of the problem: the final cost of treating disease is enormous, a growing burden on the taxpayer; the first cost, of locating and stamping out disease is less, but still has to be met.

And it is here that the blockage arises; doctors and nurses must be trained, methods to become effective need the latest equipment, and in quantity, and there is simply no means of financing all that has been found possible. Even as this is written, comes a report in the New York Times that the drive against syphilis is lagging because money can't be had to push examinations of possibly diseased persons, and that if the failure comes there, the whole project must, in a sense, be a failure.

Again, comes a new report of the tuberculosis problem in the large cities where the incidence of the disease is high in poverty-ridden areas: TB must be discovered early to arrest its devastating progress, cut its contagion, but there are not funds to even approach a full job in the cities.

THERE APPEARS accompanying "The Fight For Life" a small brochure, "Two Men on a Job," purporting to tell of the combined labors of deKruif and his chief editor, Philip Rose, who has had an important, if hidden part, in bringing his work to such large numbers of readers. This thin volume is a vulgar, atrociously written bit of journalese, seemingly gratuitous, which does no credit to either man and leaves a bad taste. There is some excuse for deKruif's popularized English, but none for the language of the dual biography which, for reasons unknown, is issued beside it. Ben Hibbs, the author, is on the staff of Country Gentleman, of which publication Mr. Rose is editor.

About Animals

By Paul H. Oehser.

"THE HOUNDS OF HASTINGS" is really a social document. It is the story of the welfare of animals in a small town, of how an enthusiastic animal lover started and kept going a local S. P. C. A. in the town of Hastings-on-Hudson, N. Y. It is a book that should prove a great asset to the humane movement, for Mrs. Krows knows what she is talking about and has divested her story of all sentimentality, not an easy thing to do when you are dealing with "cute little kittens" and "playful puppies."

It is not a high-sounding theoretical treatise but is written out of the author's own experiences with animals and her successes and failures in championing the cause of their humane treatment. There are plenty of debatable questions such as: Do cats have as much right to live as wild native birds? I believe that it would settle many humane problems to admit that there are too many cats and dogs, especially in cities, and to dispose of the surplus instead of finding homes for them. From a humane point of view, every boy should not have a dog nor every old maid a cat, fox-hunting is barbaric, and kids should not be given live chickens and rabbits at Easter. But as Mrs. Krows points out, people in general have to be educated to be humane, and evidently we have a long way to go.

The newspapers and her previous book, "The Lady and the Panda," have pretty well covered Mrs. Ruth Harkness' story of her adventuresome capture of Su Lin, a young giant panda. She has retold the story now for younger readers, who will find in it a most unusual animal chronicle. Included in the book are more than 30 full-page illustrations of the specimen of the rare and interesting panda that was brought to America from the mountains of Tibet and finally placed in the Chicago Zoo. A publisher's postscript adds: "As this book goes to press, word has reached American newspapers from war-torn China that Mrs. Harkness has been successful in her quest for a playmate for Su Lin. The new giant panda is also a baby female." It was soon after that (and after this book appeared) that news must have reached Mrs. Harkness that Su Lin had died. A sad ending to a unique story that for a while entertained the entire country, old and young.

Court Refuses Rehearing on Stockyard Case

Court

victories for the National Labor Relations Board—permission for the board to reopen its case against the Republic Steel Corporation and affirmation of its decision of last Monday on the board's employe reinstatement order against Remington Rand.

Before calling it a day, the court agreed to reconsider a radio patent opinion to which Justice Black had dissented and approved the Agriculture Department's fixing of rates to be charged by the Denver Union Stockyards Co. but postponed action on an appeal by Thomas Mooney for review of his conviction for participation in the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing.

Black Again Dessents.

The court's 6 to 1 refusal to reopen the stockyards case reiterated its position of April 25, when it sharply condemned procedure followed by Secretary Wallace in reducing rates charged at the Kansas City yards. At that time, Hughes called Wallace's failure to hold adequate hearings "fatally defective," and appealed for "fair play" by Washington's increasing number of independent Government agencies.

The repercussions were immediate and widespread. Secretary Wallace struck back at Hughes in a series of critical statements. Attempting to meet possible court objections to the Wallace procedure, the Labor Board started action to withdraw litigation involving orders it had issued without filing intermediate examiner's reports. Solicitor General Jackson moved in the court for a rehearing of the stockyards case.

Yesterday reiteration of the court's former stand was again by a vote of 6 to 1. Justice Black again dissented, Justices Cardoza and Reed did not participate.

Hughes repeated that no opportunity had been afforded the Kansas City commission men to examine findings prepared by Government prosecutors until they were served with the Secretary's order and their request for a rehearing was denied.

"Our decision was not rested upon the absence of an examiner's report," said Hughes, denying the court had departed from a former statement that "the mere matter of the presence or absence of an examiner's report was not itself determinative."

Jackson based his petition for a rehearing on arguments (already advanced by Wallace), that the court had been inconsistent and that a large sum of money representing charges paid in excess of rates fixed by the Secretary had been impounded in the district court.

Vigor Is Unusual.

Hughes replied that the statement "that the present decision is contrary to the law of the case as declared in our first opinion is wholly unfounded."

To the Government's second arguement, Hughes answered that all questions as to disposition of the impounded money should be determined by the district court.

"We have ruled that the order of the Secretary is invalid because the required hearing was not given," he concluded. "We remand the case to the district court for further proceedings in conformity with our opinion."

The judicial rebuff to Wallace and Jackson covered more than 1,200 words, contrasting with the usual brief "per curiam" findings, and was worded with vigor not usually found in staid dictums of the tribunal.

Thus ended a term marked by an increasing number of New Deal victories in a court partly recast by retirement of two conservative judges and the President's addition of Justices Black and Reed.

Validation of the Labor Relations Board's authority on a half-dozen untried fronts, and a series of opinions broadening the Federal Government's field of taxation, even to the door of hitherto immune State employes, had featured the session.

Springing indirectly from the April 25 Kansas City stockyards ruling was the court's decision yesterday that the Labor Board may withdraw from the Third Circuit Court of Appeals at Philadelphia litigation involving an order directing the Republic Steel Corporation to reinstate 5,000 striking employes.

Republic Steel and the Ford Motor Co. had resisted efforts of the board to withdraw its orders and reopen litigation in order to revise procedure in line with court findings. The Philadelphia court refused the board permission to withdraw, but yesterday's opinion by Justice Roberts reversed the circuit court finding.

"Since the statute empowers the board, before the filing of a transcript, to vacate or modify its orders, certainly it does not confer jurisdiction upon the reviewing court to prohibit the exercise of the power," ruled Roberts.

Labor Ruling 5 to 2.

"It is obvious that Congress intended to confer no jurisdiction upon the reviewing court to prevent the board from seasonably vacating or modifying its order so as to make it comport with right and justice. . . .

"We have no occasion to speculate upon the future proceedings before the board. It is enough that the petition shows that the board desired to and would have vacated its order had it not been restrained by the action of the court. What the legal effect of its future proceedings may be we need not decide."

The decision was 5 to 2. Justices Butler and McReynolds dissenting and Justices Stone and Cardoza not participating.

In dissenting, Butler and McReynolds said the lower court should have been affirmed in its refusal to reopen the case, contending the Philadelphia court had jurisdiction, and any other construction "would let the board by refusing to certify a transcript of proceedings before it, prevent judicial review of its orders."

"While there is room for difference of opinion on these questions," said Butler and McReynolds, "it is very hard to perceive on what ground it may be held that the court was without jurisdiction to decide them or even to conclude that the order was an arbitrary exertion of power, or that restraint against further delay by the board involved an abuse of discretion."

Stockyard Decision

Chief Justice Calls Wallace Charges Opinion Was Reversal "Wholly Unfounded"; Black Dissents; Reed And Cardozo Silent.

The Solicitor General moves for a rehearing of this case upon two grounds:

First. The first ground is that the court has reversed itself; that the present decision is "directly contrary to the law of the case" as established by the courts decision on the former appeal (Morgan v. United States, 298 U. S. 468); and that "a procedural omission" previously held "to be of no significance" is now regarded as "fatally defective."

These assertions are unwarranted. Not only are the two decisions consistent, but the rule announced in our former opinion was applied and was decisive of the present appeal, And the Government is in no position to claim surprise. The question whether there had been a fair hearing in the present case, in the light of the situation disclosed by the Secretary's testimony and the other evidence, was fully argued at the bar. Appellants presented both orally and in an elaborate brief, with copious references to the record, the contention which we sustained.

The first appeal was brought to this court because the plaintiffs had been denied an opportunity to prove that the Secretary of Agriculture had failed to give them the full hearing which the statute required. Their allegations to that effect had been struck out by the district court. We held its ruling to be erroneous and that the question whether the plaintiffs had a proper hearing should be determined, saying:

"But there must be a hearing in a substantial sense. And to give the substance of a hearing, which is for the purpose of making determinations upon evidence, the officer who makes the determinations must consider and appraise the evidence which justifies them."

Secretary's Testimony Disclosed Actual Facts.

The case was then tried by the district court upon that issue. From the Secretary's frank disclosure it appeared that findings of fact necessary to sustain the order had not been made by him upon his own consideration of the evidence but as stated below. Because such action fails to satisfy the requirement of a full hearing stated in our first opinion and quoted above, we reversed the judgment of the district court which sustained the order.

Testimony of the Secretary and his associates, disclosed what had actually occurred. It appeared that the oral argument before the Assistant Secretary had been general and sketchy; that, aside from the oral argument, which did not reveal the claims of the Government in any appropriate manner, the Government had submitted no brief and no statement of its contentions had been furnished; that in this situation findings had been prepared in the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, whose representatives had conducted the proceedings for the Government; that these findings, 180 in number, were elaborate, dealing with all phases of the practices and facilities at the Kansas City livestock market, the services and methods of the plaintiffs, and the costs and profits which should be allowed them as reasonable. These findings, prepared not by the Secretary but by those who had prosecuted the case for the Government, were adopted by the Secretary with certain rate alterations. No opportunity was afforded to the plaintiffs for the examination of the findings thus prepared until they were served with the Secretary's order and their request for a rehearing was denied.

Conflict of Opinions Declared Unfounded.

The statement made in the petition for rehearing that the present decision is contrary to the law of the case as declared in our first opinion is wholly unfounded. Our decision was not rested upon the absence of an examiner's report. So far from departing from our former opinion, or from the statement that the mere matter of the presence or absence of an examiner's report was not itself determinative, we reiterated both that statement and the principle underlying it in our opinion on the present appeal. We said:

"Those who are brought into contest with the Government in a quasi-judicial proceeding aimed at the control of their activities are entitled to be fairly advised of what the Government proposes and to be heard upon its proposals before it issues its final command.

"No such reasonable opportunity was accorded appellants. . . .

"The Government adverts to an observation in our former opinion that, while it was good practice—which we approved—to have the examiner, receiving the evidence in such a case, prepare a report as a basis for exceptions and argument, we could not say that that particular type of procedure was essential to the validity of the proceeding. That is true, for, as we said, what the statute requires 'relates to substance and not form.' Conceivably, the Secretary, in a case the narrow limits of which made such a procedure practicable, might himself hear the evidence and the contentions of both parties and make his findings upon the spot. Again, the evidence being in, the Secretary might receive the proposed findings of both parties, each being notified of the proposals of the other, hear argument thereon and make his own findings."

Disposition of Money Up to Lower Court.

And then, pointing out the distinction and the serious defect in the procedure in the instant case, we added:

"But what would not be essential to the adequacy of the hearing if the Secretary himself makes the findings is not a criterion for a case in which the Secretary accepts and makes as his own the findings which have been prepared by the active prosecutors for the Government, after an ex-parte discussion with them and without according any reasonable opportunity to the respondents in the proceedings to know the claims thus presented and to contest them. That is more than an irregularity in practice; it is a vital defect."

The distinction was again brought out in our recent decision in the case of National Labor Relations Board vs. Mackay Radio & Telegraph Co. (May 1, 1938), where the mere absence of an examiner's report was found not to be controlling, as the record showed that in that case the contentions of the parties had been clearly defined and that there had been in the substantial sense a full and adequate hearing.

The effort to establish a case for rehearing, either because of an asserted inconsistency in our rulings or because of lack of opportunity for full argument, is futile.

Second. The second ground upon which a rehearing is sought is that there is impounded in the district court a large sum representing charges paid in excess of the rates fixed by the Secretary. The Solicitor General raises questions both of substance and procedure as to the disposition of these moneys. These questions are appropriately for the district court and they are not properly before us upon the present record. We have ruled that the order of the Secretary is invalid because the required hearing was not given. We remand the case to the district court for further proceedings in conformity with our opinion. What further proceedings the Secretary may see fit to take in the light of our decision or what determinations may be made by the district court in relation to any such proceedings, are not matters which we should attempt to forecast or hypothetically to decide.

The petition for a rehearing is denied.

Mr. Justice Black dissents.

Mr. Justice Cardozo and Mr. Justice Reed took no part in the consideration of this petition.

Regis Toomey Regains Fame In Stage Play

'Forgotten Actor' Proves Hit in Comedy to Be Made Into Film.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, May 31 (U.P.).—The current engagement in San Francisco of the rip-snorting stage play, "Thanks for My Wife," provided a surprising sequel today to the dispatch carried here a month ago about Regis Toomey—the actor Hollywood forgot.

That story, you may remember, told how Toomey starred in 33 movies in less than two years, became one of the highest-paid leading men in town and then suddenly found himself unable to find a job anywhere. He wasn't exactly starving to death, but he was on the ragged edge and ready to toss up his acting career for truck driving, or even vacuum cleaner selling.

He went on to say that he did not know whether he was at fault, or whether Hollywood was, and that because of the peculiar etiquette of movie making he dared not ask any producer for work. The yarn was printed in newspapers all over the country and soon Toomey was receiving letters from his old fans, who almost had forgotten him and who said they hoped they'd see him on the screen soon again.

Letters Turned Trick.

A few of these letters went not to Toomey, but to the studios which had neglected him for so long. A few more days passed and Toomey started to get offers to appear in the films. The parts were none too good, nor were the salaries, but at least Toomey began to feel much better about Toomey.

One of the papers which printed the dispatch was the Hollywood Citizen-News, Toomey's home-town paper. It even carried his picture, showing that he still was the same handsome Toomey.

Mrs. Alan Dinehart, wife of the distinguished stage and screen star, was thumbing through the paper when she came to Toomey's picture. She read the dispatch and showed it to her husband, from whose brow the furrows immediately disappeared.

"He's the very man for the part," exclaimed Dinehart. "Funny I never even thought of him."

There followed a phone call—and Toomey, the forgotten actor, went into perhaps the most sparkling comedy produced on the West Coast stage this season, or last.

A Hit at Tryout.

Over the week-end we drove to Santa Barbara for the tryout of "Thanks For My Wife" before one of the most critical audiences in America. The adobe-walled Lobero Theater, which has been the scene of similar tryouts for three-quarters of a century, was jammed. The audience consisted almost entirely of the wealthy folk whose estates have made the environs of Santa Barbara a duplicate of New York's Westchester County.

There were so many curtain calls that the actors blushed. After two weeks in San Francisco, the managers hope to take the show to Broadway. The movie makers, oddly enough, already are dickering for the screen rights—and the chances are that Toomey will appear in the film version of "Thanks for My Wife" at the same studio which, only a month ago, didn't seem to know he existed.

"Thanks for My Wife," by Joseph Carole is a salty and sometimes almost bawdy comedy about a New York columnist who blackmails the grasping wife of his best friend into being a wife in reality as well as in name. He even forces her to have a child—and while he's about it specifies that it be a boy. Dinehart is the columnist; Toomey the husband and Kay Linaker the wife.

Cinema Enters Cycle of Five Costume Films

Sophisticated comedies, drawing-room dramas and mystery dramas may come and go, in cycles and otherwise, but it seems that the movie-going public may always depend upon a fillip of period costume pictures to dress up the year's film parade.

At the moment, the trend in period offerings is toward the medieval. Going into production immediately is "If I Were King," which Frank Lloyd will produce and direct for Paramount as his major contribution for the year to that company's program, with Ronald Colman starring in the role of Francois Villon, the rascal poet.

An indication of the epic proportions on which Lloyd plans to film this story of the romantic and irrepressible Villon is found in the fact that 75,000 square feet of Paramount's back lot is being devoted to a Paris street set, including the picturesque Court of Miracles, hang-out of beggars and thieves.

From the Middle Ages also has come Warner Brothers' elaborate production of "The Adventures of Robin Hood." Paramount will delve into the period again with the production of "Knight of the Round Table," later this season, and Samuel Goldwyn recently completed "The Adventures og Marco Polo," with Gary Cooper in the name role.

Although not of the medieval era, M. G. M.'s "Marie Antoinette," which will bring Norma Shearer back to the screen, must be included in the list of more elaborate period costume films.

And finally, not to be left out of the parade entirely, the Twentieth Century-Fox studio has announced plans for the presentation of the Ritz Brothers, with tongues in cheeks, in "The Three Musketeers."

Hovick Joins Cast Of 'My Lucky Star'

Statuesque Louise Hovick has been assigned to be the other woman in the four-sided romance which forms the story of Sonja Henie's current picture, "My Lucky Star," which is now in production under the direction of Roy Del Ruth.

Richard Greene, recently imported British actor, has the lead opposite Sonja, and Cesar Romero plays the other man in her life.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX, in its picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's story of "Kidnapped," has made a love story out of an original tale of rich adventure.

While the juvenile heroics of Master David Balfour and the rumbling discontent of Scotland's rebellious clans, warring against the tyranny of George II in the year 1747, under the charmed leadership of Alan Breck, have not been too much subordinated, they still no more than match the romance between Breck and the winsome little Jean MacDonald in story importance. To some in yesterday afternoon's preview audience, in the Twentieth Century-Fox bandbox theater, this placed "Kidnapped" in a decidedly second position to "Treasure Island" as an exposition of exciting and nerve-tingling events and suspenseful action.

BELL.

There are both excitement and suspense in the new film, of course, but they come intermittently to leave space in the footage for the development of a love affair.

In the matter of production values, Mr. Zanuck and his cohorts have done "Kidnapped" proud. It is a picture upon which much thought and effort—not to mention money—evidently has been expended. The various scenes of the play, without exception, are imposing in their magnitude and spectacular in their attention to the minutest details of a picturesque era in Scottish history. The film in its entirety is executed in sepia tints which adds a touch of beauty to everything that is pictured.

But the greatest interest of the picturegoing public will center in the two juveniles starred with Warner Baxter in this subject. They are Master Freddie Bartholomew and Arleen Whelan.

As all youngsters must—note Shirley Temple, Jackie Cooper, Deanna Durbin and all the rest—Master Freddie is growing up. Gone is that ingenuous youthfulness that marked his work in such earlier pictures as "David Copperfield" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The polished diction and amazing poise are still there, and the prodigious Bartholomew perhaps is a better actor than he was before, but the miracle of precocious small boyhood has largely escaped him. He is quite a lad now and it is reflected most in his face, which has become the handsome countenance of an adolescent and a little sterner than it used to be.

Miss Whelan has been hailed as one of the "finds" of the year. It was not so long ago that she was a hotel manicurist, whose screen potentialities were perceived by an observant studio official who immediately arranged a test and, practically without the usual preliminaries, launched her upon a career as leading woman and costar with players far her seniors in both years and experience before the cameras. This faith in Miss Whelan's latent ability is largely justified by her work in "Kidnapped."

Arleen Whelan is a young woman of striking beauty, with hair that photographs dark, but is said to flame off the screen, and eyes that are said to be emerald. Since her present vehicle is not in Technicolor, we will take the studio's word for it.

What we do know positively is that this promising young discovery possesses a voice that is surprisingly like Janet Gaynor's—until she sings, when it becomes a mellow and pleasing contralto. Upon occasion there also is considerable emotional intensity in her scenes of greatest romantic stress. Her subsequent career will be worth watching.

So will "Kidnapped" be when it reaches the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday, for in it are cast a long list of players of the first rank—C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, John Carradine, Nigel Bruce, Miles Mander, Ralph Forbes, H. B. Warner, Arthur Hohl, E. E. Clive, Halliwell Hobbes, Montagu Love, Maroni Olsen, Mary Gordon, Forrester Harvey, Clyde Cook, Holmes Herbert, Brandon Hurst and Vernon Steele.

That, ladies and gentlemen, is quite a cast on any man's celluloid.

Speaking of next week's bill at the Capitol—as somebody seems to have been—the "Opera vs. Jazz" competition on the stage will be worth bending an ear to. This friendly joust will be participated in by Barney Rapp and his "Swing New Englanders" and Phil Lampkin and his resident "Concert Masters." Some 35 instrumentalists will be engaged in the tilt and all are masters in their own particular forms of musical expression. Barney Rapp's orchestra is recognized as one of the country's leaders in the swing style and, whether you know it or not, there are at least a half dozen members of the Lampkin orchestra at the Capitol who have had symphonic experience with some of the foremost classic organizations in the United States. While this "Opera vs. Jazz" business will be in a spirit of utmost friendliness, it also will be keen and a real contest. You and you and you will be on the jury sitting out front to decide the winner by the degree to which you bruise your palms.

That high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, division manager of Columbia Pictures, exhorts me to see "Holiday," costarring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant, and see for myself that all of those unkind things that were spouted on the West Coast about Miss Hepburn's being "poison at the box-office" constituted just so much of the old malarky.

"Miss Hepburn could not possibly have a better 'come back' than her performance in 'Holiday,'" says Mr. Galanty. "She has, in fact, never given a better performance in her life."

That does not fall under these eyes as precisely what would constitute "poison at the box-office," especially with a supporting cast that includes, in addition to Mr. Grant, of course, such players as Henry Kolker, Lew Ayres—who also is said to "come back" in this film, if he ever has been away—Doris Noland and Edward Everett Horton.

Since "Holiday" is being screened for the press by the Warner Brothers executives this afternoon at 1:30, preliminary to its opening on the Earle screen Friday, there will be more of this tomorrow.

Have you an old mug in your home?

I don't mean what you mean. I mean an old shaving mug. If you have one, the Roadside Theater would like to borrow it for their first production, opening out on the Rockville pike on Monday, June 13. The Roadside's first bill will be "Sweeney Todd, or the Demon Barber of Fleet Street." Back in Sweeney Todd's time, virtually every patron of a tonsorial parlor owned his own shaving mug and brush, which he left on a shelf on the premises in the barber's care. This is the sort of thing the Roadsiders are after—the older and more ornate the better.

A pair of tickets to the opening performance will be awarded the possessors of the two oldest and fanciest mugs reposing in Washington attics or cellars—or anywhere else, for that matter. It will be necessary to call Richard Creyke, phone CL-0036, or Mrs. Catherine Prichard Romney, WA-7700, apartment 1047, by Wednesday, June 8, however, because it is the plan to exhibit them, properly placarded with the owners' names, in a downtown window display prior to the opening of the play.

Ask granddad, he knows!

Personal aside to Guy Robertson: Freddie Clark may still be found at the Earle Theater in the capacity of orchestra contractor, arranger and occasional soloist on the Hammond electric organ. Jo Lombardi now swishes the baton. As to the standings of Florence Reed, Helen Mencken and Otis Skinner in Walter Morehouse's symposium of great performances in the "Broadway After Dark" column in the New York Sun, it will be necessary to address Mr. Morehouse, in care of that paper.

A Manicurist Who Became a Star

who almost overnight bridged the gap between hotel manicurist and star of the screen. Miss Whelan is cast as a costar with Warner Baxter and Freddie Bartholomew in the Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's story of "Kidnapped," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday of this week.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., May 31.—Did you ever sit on a soft, cushy chair looking down into the eager, intelligent faces of 30 young women, sitting at your feet on the floor, all much smarter than you could ever hope to be? A terrifying experience for the first five minutes, then fun. Known as John Alderman's Salon, it consists of young society girls, most of them married, college graduates, pretty, beautifully dressed, alert and eager. Don't waste their time playing bridge, but work like beavers for our symphony orchestra, Children's Hospital, Assistance League and Girl Scout movement.

HEDDA HOPPER

They all have, for five years, taken one afternoon off a week to listen to someone—who has been in the thick of things—talk. I didn't talk, just gabbed—answering their questions, which came at me fast as bullets from a machine gun. But I learned more than they did. My eyes fairly popped at some of their answers.

I asked which, of all the motion picture stars—if they could get him—would they choose for a romantic evening. Silence for a second.

Then: "Just what do you mean by an evening?" "Well," I replied, "dinner, dancing, music or conversation, then good night."

They chose Ronald Colman and Herbert Marshall — couldn't be budged. Not that I urged them. Their third choice was Charles Boyer. Was that letting down our American manhood! Clark Gable grand for hunting or fishing. Loved Tyrone Power on the screen, but too young for them—not one girl there over 25. They objected to the cut of Errol Flynn's hair. Liked Bob Taylor, but not romantically interested. Wanted to see Basil Rathbone play a romantic role on the screen. So does his wife. Wanted better parts for Tom Beck. Gary Cooper perfect for a stroll in the country. Thought they could learn a lot from Bill Powell and Spencer Tracy. They were right, too.

Do studios insist upon stars living as luxuriously as they do? The answer is "no." They can live any way they choose. No one lives more simply than Garbo or Janet Gaynor. Garbo still rides in a second-hand car. Her second in ten years.

They said they would welcome instruction from Paul Muni and Constance Collier. Not because they wanted to be actresses but for cultural experience.

Think Joan Crawford's thinness makes her look ill. Want to welcome her back in real parts—not synthetic ladies.

Why did I write a column? I sometimes wonder—but how I love it. And these girls, too, for having me as their guest of honor.

Dined at Frances Marion's house with Frances Parkinson Keyes. She is a friend of the great all over the world. Here for a few days' rest. Will autograph her latest book, "Paris Unknown," at one of our biggest stores. Then on to Denver for her third son's wedding. She'll wear black chantilly lace over pink. Her mother wore the same over white. Grandmother and great grandmother wore it first over burnt orange—strong lace, that.

For years Mrs. Keyes wrote the Washington lowdown as wife of a Senator. Their feuds, clothes, what they ate, how their tables were set—whether they spanked their babies.

In Washington today she said the press is welcomed with open arms at all the White House functions. They absolutely adore Mrs. Roosevelt. The press used to stand behind screens. It was Mrs. Harding who really opened wide the doors, which have been kept that way ever since.

English Presents Few Difficulties For La Darrieux

Danielle Darrieux's unusual feat of mastering English in less than five months is a source of endless pride to the French star's language coach, Mary Lait Salemson.

This was revealed when Miss Salemson visited the set where the vivacious French actress was completing "The Rage of Paris," gay comedy romance in which she is co-starred with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and supported by Mischa Auer, Helen Broderick and Louis Hayward.

"I've coached most of the foreign stars who have come to Hollywood in the past three years," the noted language instructor declared. "But Miss Darrieux absolutely amazed me by the speed with which she picked up words, phrases and pronunciation of English. Along with her youth, eauty and charm, she has a keen, fresh mind, rare diction and a retentive memory.

Historic Mill.

The largest redwood lumber mill in the world plays an important part in Warner Bros.' "Valley of the Giants." It is the Hammond Lumber Co. mill at Samoa, Humboldt County, and its capacity is 100,000,000 feet a year. Scenes were filmed on its wharf and in the log ponds. The interior of the mill was not usable because the picture is laid in 1902.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 31.

ACCORD: Two weeks ago, in Paris, the Duke of Windsor and his wife attended a dinner party at which many dignitaries were present . . . Windsor, as befits his rank, was accorded the seat of honor next to his hostess . . . He looked around the table, and discovered that his wife was seated at the other end, with some minor members of royalty . . . "Are you looking for the duchess?" the hostess asked . . . "No," Windsor replied. "I'm looking for Her Royal Highness."

DEFEAT: A road company of Lucille LaVerne's play, "Sun-Up," has been touring America, and gave its last performance in Denver, Colo., when its funds were exhausted . . . Some members of the stranded troupe thereupon sent an urgent plea to Equity for assistance in getting them back to their homes . . . Equity, which provides aid to stranded members of its organization, thereupon checked its membership list, to ascertain whether all these troupers were entitled to assistance . . . The checkup revealed that the only full-paid Equity member involved in the current presentation of "Sun-Up" is the author, Lucille LaVerne.

• • • •

ALFRED HITCHCOCK: Negotiations finally were completed whereby you will direct a movie for Darryl Zanuck . . . Arthur Murray: At the White House ball, Cela Gamba, wife of Band Leader Ruby Newman, disappeared for 15 minutes. She spent that time with Mrs. Roosevelt—who was teaching her the hunny-bug . . . Speaker Bankhead: One of the two former Senators described as "graft takers" by Congressman McFarlane, wrote to him, expressed thanks for not having mentioned his name—but insisted that the money he accepted was a legal fee.

• • • •

SAM H. HARRIS: George M. Cohan was in "21" and sat next to Mrs. George Earle, wife of Pennsylvania's Governor, who just won a tough primary battle. Cohan placed a handkerchief over his mouth and apologized: "I'm sorry, but I've had a cold and the doctors advised me to eat a lot of garlic" . . . "Oh, I wouldn't notice that," Mrs. Earle replied. "Don't forget—I've been hanging around a lot of politicians lately."

• • • •

FINANCE DEPT.: Armstrong L. Mathews and the Clover Splint Coal Co., two of the defendants in the Harlan County trials, in Kentucky, pleaded "nolo contendere" . . . The report in Kentucky is that this is in connection with a deal—calling, in case of conviction, for Mathews not to be sentenced and for the Clover Split Coal Co. to be fined only $5,000.

• • • •

DRAMA DEPT.: Some weeks ago Clarence Gould, the broker, and Diane, of Dario and Diane, were hit by an automobile. Diane sustained a torn scalp, bruised ribs, bruised spine and injuries to her legs—which necessitated the cancellation of a London engagement for the summer . . . She sought to recover damages. But the car which hit her is a 1927 Ford, owned by an insured widower who is on relief. He has only one eye, and Diane tried to sue the motor vehicle bureau for issuing a license under these circumstances . . . "The law is," Diane was told by officials, "that if an applicant has only one eye—and can see all right with that one—he can be licensed."

WALTER NELSON, the Michigan jurist who closed the Ford banks, is in line for promotion to one of the newly created Federal judgeships . . . Dixie Davis, who denies that he will testify against Jimmy Hines, was removed from the Tombs Prison for a number of days—between the hours of 1 and 5—and not in connection with his alleged toothache . . . Municipal Court Justice McNulty, who was mentioned in the Gerson name-changing case, and who then admitted that he regretted the error, will be penalized by the mildest form of censure—although the report will condemn the name-changing practice.

Bette Joins Polar Bathing Addicts

Bette Davis could hardly wait to move into her new home in Coldwater Canyon because it is the first house with a swimming pool she has occupied in her long stay in Hollywood.

After she moved in her nearest neighbors paid a friendly call and offered use of their swimming pool for herself and friends any time she wanted it.

"But I have a swimming pool," she said. "I'll not need to bother you."

"Oh, yes," said the visitors, "but yours isn't heated. You'll find ours more comfortable until midsummer."

Bette investigated and found that her pool had no facilities for heating the water. Not discouraged by this, she began to train for cold water bathing by taking her dip in the mornings, staying in five minutes longer each day.

Varying this with a daily modified sun bath—modified because she is subject to sunstroke—Bette believes the cold water and the cool sun has improved her health to such an extent that she need fear no further breakdowns following a long picture schedule such as she will have on her new picture, "The Sisters."

Train 40 Girls in Dance of the Veils

The ancient Egyptian dance of the veils, almost forgotten in the modernization of that country, will be revived for the movies.

Nick Castle and Geneva Sawyer, dance directors, last week were assigned to stage the famous Arabic number for the spectacle drama, "Suez," in which Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Annabella are starring.

The two dance directors will interview 500 girls in their search for 40 who have had previous basic training in Oriental dances. Since the dance is one of the most difficult of all numbers, the chorus will rehearse for two months before going in front of the movie camera.

Century of Acting Brought to Film

Between May Robson and her gray-haired stand-in, May Warren, Mike Curtiz, who is directing "Sister Act," has the benefit of 91 years of feminine stagecraft and technique.

Miss Robson is playing her fifty-fifth season as an actress. She is one of the rare living notables who has enjoyed star rating on stage and screen for a full 50 years. Mrs. Warren, her stand-in, has almost 40 years of theater and film experience.

The two smiling, gray-haired women form the constant center of giggling and interested groups about the set.

'Shag' Duo Hit Of Shoreham's Current Show

When that chi-chi crowd at the Shoreham Terrace goes off the deep end for an act, cheering and whistling—well, that's what they do for Dick and Leota Nash when the kids go into their skyhooting shag.

Gotta grain of sadism in your soul? Gratify it by seeing the "Danse Montmartre" of Lafayette and LaVerne. The young man not only slaps and slings his girl around in approved Apache style, but he boots her something terreefic! Great boy. The Honey Sisters' name understates it. These sweety-pies dance and look like angels. La Trianita lends Castilian tang in "La Corrida" (bull fight) and a Gitana number.

Barnee and his boys and the glossy floor show move out on the Terrace or back into the Blue Room just as Mr. Thermometer suggests.

"Tiny" Meeker (Powhatan Roof) weighs 310 pounds, is built like a heavy duty truck and how he "trucks."

Steve Le Sieur and his lads have started their season on the Powhatan Roof amid a blaze of praise. The shiny swing that long kept them at the Congressional Club also hit the bullseye with Powhataners. That coolish weather didn't bother the Powhatan opening, bright with big parties. Good idea was that of Bettina Belmont who brought her Dandie Dinmont terrier along as a chaperon.

Today Sidney's musicians in the Mayflower Lounge will look even slicker than usual for they'll be togged out in white linens circa 1938.

Sid Cowan, kidnaped by the radio, rejoins Sidney's outfit next week. Sid is the bass player, remember, who sings in all languages except Latin, Greek and Sanscrit.

That soothing, pinky twilight of Wardman's Metronome Room misleads, for there's more than a touch of madness to the Paul Kain music.

Paul goes wacky with sax, clarinet and moroccos. Drummer Sammy Ferro leans away back and yells like an Indian medicine man. Ted Alexander smacks the daylights out if the bass and boils up hot songage. But after the cyclone comes serenity with little Harry Alverson stepping up to the mike with sweetheart songs.

Those lads and girls who stand dozens deep around the bandstand at Glen Echo drinking in the Henry Halstead swing, have a suspicious look of "umph-h" in their eyes. "Say, do you think those kids are trying to flirt with you or your boys or Margaret?" someone asked. Henry grinned "That's all right by be. I think it's a swell idea."

Col. Schloss, head man at Glen Echo, says the Spanish Ballroom is warm in cool weather, cool when it's hot. He oughta know.

Today the Hi-Hat celebrates its June wedding of two years ago. That is, its marriage to Oscar, the human dynamo of cordiality and efficiency. And what a happy match it's been for Oscare and the Hi-Hat. They've both been in a state of beaming activity and rosy prosperity ever since. Prosit! Oscar, to you and your native old Vienna.

You guys and girls who spin to a stop before Johnny Shaw at the Madrillon to ask for a special number, well-l, you may want to give Johnny a treat. Ask him to play "By Myself." It's the tune he truly loves.

Johnny's is the only band in town playing "Martha" in that Connie Boswell manner.

So many entertaining teams are married. But "We Too" at the Annapolis Anchor Room are just professional pals. Their real names are Clyde Kissinger and Jayne Lowe and (we trust this busts no glamor) Clyde is all married up to a sweetie person who keeps house for him in a trailer.

Who said they couldn't swing it back in 1900? Wait till you see Manno and Stratfford at the Lotus go into their cakewalk to a fire-spitting version of "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

Al Norton says that Manno and Strafford are the best dancers ever to appear at the Lotus. And that is a citation from headquarters. Seething, too, are the other troupers.

'Ja like your girls big, beautiful and bouncing? Then Chris(tine) Themaine, Mayfair's June special, is just your dish. Chris has one of those sugary sopranos that melts in yo' ears. Also new is pianist Dio Dato whose semi-classical numbers contrast handsomely with Perry Miller's speedier style.

A few of us have double-track minds but Charlie Cooper is showing the Bamboo Gardens clientele that he has a triple-track physique. Charlie does one of those terrific flattened-out handstands, smokes a cigarette and plays a harmonica at the same time.

The Rainbow Room of the Hamilton and the glittering dining room adjoining remind of the Siamese twins. You can sit in the dining room, eat your head off, and still enjoy the sumptuous Meyer Davis music. Or, if you're on a diet you can linger in the Rainbow Room proper and sip your dinner.

What's better than one opening? Why two openings, dope. So while the Show Boat on the Baltimore boulevard opened last week and is doing beautifully, thank you, the management has decided to have a "formal opening" this Friday. "The first opening was so much fun that we decided to have another," says Mrs. Sallie Boynton, captainette of Show Boat. Don't forget that the Show Boat is a real boat and would float right down the boulevard, if the boulevard were a canal.

Ha! It's a caballero in the King Cole Room. Vincente del Garza is the name and he's a husky, personable guy who looks more like a bull fighter than a singer. Make Vincente sing for you his own composition, "Destino" with its tom-tom guitar beat. It will do things to you. Evelyn Knight remains at King Cole. How could they let her go?

That fine O'Donnell culinary touch is making customers at Griffith Farms very happy, and the Saturday night dance music of Happy Walker makes them happy, too. The notable O'Donnell sea food specialties can be had at Griffith Farms as well as other elegant vittles.

Brinkley's is away out by the Navy Yard, but worth the trip to hear Jack Torry's music and sip a South Sea drink. A nice place, well managed and cheerful.

Capital Night Club Favorites

House Bloc Asks Inquiry on Hague

By the Associated Press.

A House liberal bloc of 32 members decided last night to ask a Congressional and Justice Department investigations of "the arrogant violations of constitutional liberties in New Jersey."

They added a demand that the special House committee on un-American activities "subpena Mayor Hague (of Jersey City), public officials and the judges of the New Jersey courts who have been party to the disgraceful episodes."

Postoffice Seeks 'Streamlining' of Rural Mail Box

The rural mail box, as typically American as the Mississippi, must be streamlined to conform with Postoffice regulations, Postoffice officials announced yesterday in advance of "Clean Up Rural Box Week," which begins August 1.

The sponsors are the National Rural Carriers Association, whose 34,000 members have for years contended with all the makeshift boxes rural America could devise.

Fearing blunt orders to improve the boxes would antagonize farmers, the Postoffice has devised a "diplomatic" approach to be used by rural carriers.

Boy, 15, Confesses Murder of Girl, 5

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 31.—A 15-year-old former newsboy today viewed the mutilated body of Shirley Ann Woodburn, 6, and confessed, police said, the brutal attack-slaying of the golden-haired child.

Police Capt. Patrick Hayes reported the youth, Lindberg Heist, alias Trent, was taken to see the girl's body at a mortuary, where he muttered:

"I did it, I did it, but I guess I must have been out of my head."

Body of Boatsman Hunted in Potomac

Sharpsburg, Md., May 31.—Search was resumed today for the body of Earl E. Snader, 43, Waynesboro, Pa., who was drowned last night in the Potomac River at Mountain Lock, near here, when his sailboat capsized. The overturned boat was found.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

In bridge, it is dangerous to set up any rule on an absolute basis. In all the years I have played bridge I have never known one rule that could not, on occasion, be broken with good result. If I were given to the use of "never" in connection with bridge advice, I would say: "Never (meaning rarely) leave your partner in the double of a low suit contract when you are void of that suit." The following hand created quite a furor in a prominent New York club.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K J 10 9 ♡ — ◇ A 9 2 ♣ A Q J 9 5 2
♠ 5 3 2 ♡ Q 7 6 4 ◇ J 10 ♣ 8 6 4 3	North West East South	♠ 6 4 ♡ A K 5 3 2 ◇ K 8 5 4 3 ♣ 7
	♠ A Q 8 7 ♡ J 10 9 8 ◇ Q 7 6 ♣ K 10

North	East	West	South
1 ♣	1 ♡	Dbl.	Redbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

I have recorded the bidding as it occurred, not as I recommend it. In the first place I do not approve South's double of one heart. But this double was good by comparison with North's pass to the redouble. Quite true, North had an excellent hand and more honor-tricks than this opening bid guaranteed. But the distribution of the North hand was such as to make the defense of one heart a highly questionable proceeding, whereas North could be virtually certain of a game at the most favorable denomination, with chance of a slam were he able to find a good fit in any suit.

In the actual play East made one heart redoubled, and went game. The hand was later submitted to many experts and they were unanimous in denouncing North's pass. The consensus was that the bidding should have proceeded as follows:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ♡	Dbl.	Redbl.
2 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 N T	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

In the above sequence the one heart double and redouble have been taken for granted, though disapproved, the only point being the subsequent bidding. Actually a seven spade contract would be the theoretically perfect one on the combined hands, since it could easily be made. Two heart ruffs in the North hand would produce 13 tricks.

Some bystanders suggested that North's proper bid over one heart redoubled was three clubs, but this would not have been nearly as good as the heart rue-bid in the above sequence. The outstanding point, however, was that North should not have passed and permitted the opponents to play such a low contract.

Education Costs Issue in Fight on Beauty Shop Pay

The question of the minimum wage of beauty shop workers containing an item of 4.49 cents a day for self-improvement (including newspapers, magazines, library fees and education) was debated yesterday before the District Minimum Wage Board.

Representatives of employe and employer groups also argued whether or not the girls should be allowed $35 a year for a recreation budget to include movies, swimming, dancing, club dues and postage stamps. Employes argued yes; employers, no.

Third item to be declared excessive by employer representatives was $30 a year for vacation expenses. The questions were not settled. Further hearings will be held by the board Thursday at which time ten persons are scheduled to be heard on various items.

Miller Mentioned For Radio Chief

By the Associated Press.

Neville Miller was mentioned in broadcasting circles yesterday as the man likely to become president of the National Association of Broadcasters on July 15.

The association's executive committee will meet next week to pick a successor to Mark Ethridge, who has been serving as temporary president.

Miller is now assistant to the president of Princeton University and formerly was Mayor of Louisville, Ky. In assuming the presidency, Miller would become a dominant figure in the broadcasting industry. The association has a membership of 440 stations.

Ethridge soon is to resume his work as vice president and general manager of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Times and as executive head of Station WHAS.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl of 14, Average Student in Brilliant Family, Feels Despair at Constant Goading; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 14 years old and a junior in high school. I have an usual problem. I am not a brilliant girl, just average, but my brothers and sisters before me have all been honor students and my father is a professor, which means only one thing—I get lessons crammed down my throat day in and day out. I'm not allowed to have any girl friends to spend the night with me; it might distract me from my studies. I'm not allowed to play basketball (which I'm crazy about); it might distract me from my studies. Go to parties? Well, I reckon not!

* * * *

If I bring home a grade as low as "C" on my report card, life is unbearable. Such remarks as "Well, Dad, looks like the intelligence ran out before it got to her," are passed continuously. What can I do? I'll be out of high school at the age of 15 and jammed right into college. Sometimes I think I'll just plain go nuts!

* * * *

I can't have any real friends. Who wants to be called "teacher's pet" and "bookworm" all the time? Nobody likes me very much, because they all think I'm just trying to get ahead of them. If I were just naturally smart and couldn't help it, they might feel differently. But I'm not and don't want to be. What do you suggest? HAZEL.

* * * *

Family's at Fault.

DEAR HAZEL: As a professor, as one who specializes in the field of theoretical preparation for life, your father presumably knows what he is about in holding your nose so closely to the grindstone of school work and "home work," but in my heterodox opinion he is making a great mistake in trying to mold all his children's minds and personalities to a given pattern, without due regard for their individual differences and aptitudes. In my opinion, the very fact that you do not have a brilliant aptitude for "book learning," that you are not the scholar type, either by temperament or intellectual endowment, makes it the more imperative that you be allowed opportunity for discovering what special, useful and self-satisfying social qualities you may potentially possess along other than scholarly lines.

* * * *

However, since the academic mind is remarkable for (among other things) a rather dogmatic autocracy of opinion about everything, I seriously doubt that there is anything I could say, or you might do, which would suggest to your male parent the unwisdom of trying to make an intellectual silk purse out of what obviously was intended to be a jolly, unabashed and eminently down-to-earth sow's ear. (And the simile is not intended as an unflattering reflection upon yourself!)

* * * *

Your salvation lies in holding fast (regardless of parent-professorial pressure) to your blessedly sound sense of humor and your sane, honest sense of perspective; in refusing to be cowed by your family's snobbishly intellectual bias, into an ashamed underestimation of your great social value as a merely average human being. Remember that it is the persons of average and varied capabilities and interests who are the real salt of the earth, and that the essential purpose of education (as conceived by great educators) is to stimulate in the mind of youth a spirit of inquiry into those subjects, science and pursuits which are of special interest to, and hold special promise of personal fulfillment for, him; that it should not be aborted to the end and aims of superimposing on each and every individual certain stereotyped brands and precise quantities of formally approved knowledge.

* * * *

When the family looks down its collective nose at the C's on your report card, laugh up your sleeve at the ridiculous importance it attaches to letters on a piece of pasteboard. The only real harm thair attitude can do you is, as I have already indicated, to warp your perspective on life and destroy your self-respect. And this they cannot do if you refuse to let them do it. Do the very best you can (angels can do no more) with your studies, and if and when you fail to meet the family standard in the way of marks, don't let it trouble you unduly. If any single member of your family possessed really civilized intelligence, he or she would recognize the intolerable injustice, the blind, inhumane ignorance of the others' attitude toward you and would rally to your defense in double-quick time.

* * * *

If your nerves actually are cracking under the strain, see the family doctor and state your case fully and freely. If your family's demands are, without question, dangerously unreasonable, he can be counted on to recognize the fact; and he will, if it appears necessary, prescribe a more congenial and less brain-fagging schedule. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

RAISIN ROLLS.

½ cup of raisins
½ cup of milk
1 yeast cake
2 tablespoons of sugar
1 teaspoon of salt
1 egg yolk
3 tablespoons of fat
2½ cups of flour
2 tablespoons of honey
1 tablespoon of butter
⅛ teaspoon of cinnamon

Rinse raisins in hot water. Dissolve yeast in lukewarm milk. Add sugar, salt, beaten egg yolk, fat and half the flour. Mix until smooth. Add raisins and rest of flour and mix. Knead on floured board until smooth. Cover and let rise until double in bulk. Punch down. Let rise again about 40 minutes. Form into small balls and placed in greased muffin pans allowing three to a pan. Cover and let rise again until double in size. Heat honey, butter and spice and use to brush on top of rolls. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 15 minutes.

Plaids in Paris.

Paris (U.P.)—Alix is especially fond of plaids. She flares a varicolored plaid surah into a voluminous demi-jacket. She puts full plaid panels on the jacket of a navy ensemble. She uses green, yellow and black plaid for a short jacket, its front panels extending into a sort of overskirt. Green and mauve plaid make a simple wool dress worn under a black coat. Blue and yellow plaid line an Alix navy blue coat.

Long Silk Coats for Summer Chic

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

SILK coats are fashion news as smart summer toppings, in both printed and solid colors. They tie in beautifully with the feminine trend in styling and add swank to an otherwise simple ensemble. They are particularly chic to top a spectator sports dress for informal evening wear—a day in the country and an evening in town. While the general theme is dressmaker styling, there are numerous interpretations on this popular basic plan.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 31.

THIS IS THE best day I can find on my desk-pad to say a final word on the summery toggery, and so I bring it to the clientele from the inspired lips of Fira Benenson, head of the salon de couture of one of the finest Fifth avenue stores. The fact that this merely means "boss of the better fashion department," and that Fira is really the Countess Illinska no one holds against her.

ALICE HUGHES

Fira the countess just stepped off the Normandie with the fanciest human cargo of the year, and had these things to say regarding the style "musts" of that dear Paris for the next few months. The most important item on the list seems to be a two-piece silk print suit. These suits dominated the picture on the boulevards. Then there were endless bows—and not the boy-friend type. Fira reports bows on hats, lapels and everywhere there was room for one or more.

Other details for summer are two-buttoned kid shoes for evening, embroidered jackets, lot of blue, and small puffed sleeves. Flowers and veils of the past spring are disappearing. "The smart women are still wearing the perennial pump," opines the Countess. "Freak hats and shoes are not seen."

* * * *

As for colors, the outstanding ones now on view are cornflower blue and mauve. Chanel's new dresses are romantic, Schiaparelli's are slinky and vampish, and so runs the tale of Paris in early summer.

It's all very nice. All very sound and attractive. Now the only two questions before us are (1) How are we going to get to Paris? and (2) Even if we don't, just how are we going to finance these matters at home? Get out the old family dream-book, ladies, and see what we can dig up!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Thanks to goodness Lily Pons finally came out and said something definite about her wedding with Andy Kostelanetz, the able radio maestro! This romance has been going on for years, and now that we know that the happy date is on or about June 25, and that on the 26 the ecstatic lovebirds will sail for Rio we are much relieved. Once the other Colossal Mystery, who is to play Scarlett in "Gone With the Wind," when if it is finally filmed, is solved, the world can settle down and fight its wars in peace!

Cases of dog-trouble are always on tap here, and the latest fell to the lot of Citizen Mrs. Fannie Kochaniewicz, which you needn't try to pronounce. Fined no less than $50 for allowing her police dog to roam unleashed and unmuzzled, and unable to give up such a fabulous sum, Mrs. K. is now languishing in the cooler for 20 days! Ah, Fannie, you should have kept a nice pussy-cat!

* * * *

Tragic sight as the lot near my house was cleared of statues and their bearded creators. All the marbles, bronzes and clays were moved away, save one beige-colored and entirely naked lady. There she sat, deserted, with her bare back to the turmoil of Park avenue, and with her chin on one hand. She seemed to be brooding on the futility of her lonely lot, abandoned by eager creator and gaping visitors!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Other Foot.

HE—Say, Mamie . . . I wish you'd listen to this. "MAN OF 75 WEDS GIRL OF 18."

SHE—That's an outrage. There ought to be a law——

HE—What's wrong with it—if she loves him?

SHE—Loves him! Men are the biggest fools.

HE—Now, now, wait a minute! Here's their picture. Say, I want to tell you he's a remarkably well preserved man for his age. See . . .

SHE—Don't tell me they've got their pictures in the paper! If I did a thing like that I certainly wouldn't be such a fool as to have my picture taken . . . Where is it? . . . Oh, look at the doting old idiot . . . Holding hands!

HE—What's wrong with them holding hands?

SHE—It's disgusting! What on earth can she see in him?

HE—Wait! Listen here what it says, "The elderly bridegroom declared he didn't feel a day over 45."

SHE—Well, he looks plenty over it. Another thing, where'll she be five years from now when he's 80—if he lives that long.

HE—Say, he's probably good for at least 15 more years.

SHE—Heaven forbid!

HE—Well, I don't care, I read in the paper yesterday where a man of 90 had become the father of twins.

SHE—That's the most disgraceful thing I ever heard.

HE—You've got to look at these things sensibly. Now take this man of 75. He can give this girl a lot of things a younger man couldn't.

SHE—Well, I'd rather get out and buy myself a few things. Anyway, you just wait and see what happens when some nice young, handsome, tall, brown-eyed, curly haired, broad-shouldered, athletic fellow—

HE—That's no way to talk. She might be the type that likes older men.

SHE—But not that old!

HE—Say, wait, listen to this, "The happy bride . . ."

SHE—I don't want to hear another word of it. It makes me sick.

HE—I don't see why you're getting so excited.

SHE—I'm not excited. I just feel sorry for the poor old fool. He thinks she's in love with him.

HE—Well, maybe she might have a lot of affection for him. You women are all so narrow.

SHE—Yes, and you men are all holding up for him because you'd like to go out and do the same thing.

HE—Oh, I wouldn't say that——

SHE—It's the truth. I know if I was to die tomorrow, you'd go out and marry the first 18-year-old girl that'd have you——

HE—Now Mamie——

SHE—Yes, and bring her in here to be the mother of my children——

HE—Say, wait a minute——

SHE—No, I guess 18'd be too old for you. You'd probably want one around 14.

HE—Say! You women are all alike. You're just jealous of the girl!

SHE—What? . . . Me jealous! Me jealous of that girl!

HE—Well, you sound like it.

SHE—Me jealous! Say, do you think for a moment I'd have that old fool? Do you think I'd even look at him? Say, I'm a good deal past 18, but he's way too old for me——

HE—Wait a minute. I didn't mean——

SHE—Me jealous! The idea! Say, I wouldn't have any old man! I'd starve first! I wouldn't have—I—I—Oh, what's the use of talking to you? I don't want to hear another word about it.

HE—Sa-ay, Mamie! . . . Come here . . . I wish you'd listen to this. Ha! Ha! Ha!

SHE—What on earth is it?

HE—Ha! Ha! Ha! This beats anything I ever heard! The old fool! Ha! Ha! Ha!

SHE—What old fool?

HE—Ha! Ha! Ha! Just listen. "WIDOW OF 59 WEDS YOUTH OF 22." Ha! Ha! Ha! Can you beat that? No fool like an old fool! Ha! Ha! Ha!

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

'Wall Bicycle' Will Take Off Inches That Make Bathing Suit Bulge.

By Ida Jean Kain.

JUNE ARRIVES, fair and warmer . . . and the forecast is for briefer bathing suits and slimmer hiplines. Between today and the Fourth of July you can take two inches off the hips, which will make a decided improvement in your bathing suit figure.

It can't be done with a diet. If you were to go on a diet to lose ten pounds you might not take a bit of this weight off the hipline. But if you will exercise along with your diet you can reduce the hipline by as much as three inches with the loss of only ten pounds.

The fastest working hip exercises involve pedaling with the legs, leg swinging and kicking and the massage action of rolling.

"Wall Bicycle" Helps.

POSITION: Lying on back on the floor with hips close against the wall and legs straight up wall, arms stretched on floor back of head.

MOVEMENT: Slide one leg down the wall until the knee is resting on the chest. As you slide this leg back up the wall, bring the other leg down so that both legs are working rhythmically. This exercise may be continued for 50 counts at the beginning since the position relieves all strain. Press the buttocks against the wall and the small of the back against the floor and stretch the trunk muscles.

When you have mastered the leg movement increase the range of the exercise by bringing the shoulder and arm muscles into play. As the knee is flexed on the chest, flex the elbows and bring hands to the shoulders, working arms and legs simultaneously and in rhythm.

Beware of Sway Back.

High backward kicking sometimes has a tendency to make the curve of the back more pronounced. If you are inclined to have a sway back, do your kicking from a table.

POSITION: First stand with the front of the hips against a table, and then bend forward at the hips and let the entire upper part of the body rest on the table.

MOVEMENT: Using alternate legs kick backward as high as possible. You will find that this position relieves all back strain. Continue for ten counts, and gradually increase until you kick 50 times.

Rolling and spanking have a massage action which breaks down fatty tissue and gives a smoother hipline. Rolling from a semi-sitting position usually puts the pressure on the widest portion of the hipline.

Begin your hip slimming with 5 minutes of exercise. At the end of the first week you should be rolling, kicking and pedaling for 10 minutes, and after that for 20 to 30 minutes daily. Honest-to-goodness exercise, practiced daily, will take off those inches.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

How Liver Is Checked.

More and more in our day diagnosis is becoming functional rather than anatomical. In other words, we do not wait to say "this man's heart is full of scar tissue," or "his kidneys are half-destroyed" (which is an anatomical diagnosis), but we try to find out what his heart is capable of doing, and how competent the kidneys are to perform their function.

In middle age, people who have a feeling of being run down and whose heart, kidneys and other vital organs are normal, are likely to suffer from a deficient liver function. In fact, the liver out of gear is liable to be the first step in the general degeneration of old age.

Functional tests of the liver are, therefore, being investigated with great interest and activity.

The liver is a complicated organ which performs a good many different functions. In the first place, it excretes poisons and end products of the body, particularly bile. In the second place, it is an essential organ in the utilization of sugar and starches in the body. It absorbs the sugars and starches from the intestines and changes them into what is called "glycogen," or animal starch, releasing this to the muscles on demand. It also has important functions in fat and protein nutrition. The liver also forms the substance, fibrinogen, which is essential for the clotting of the blood.

Any single test for liver function is, therefore, obviously inadequate, and up until recently we have had no test which really indicates the total functional capacity of the liver. The old levulose test measures simply the starch function of the liver, and dye tests have been unreliable.

I was interested recently in seeing a new test for liver function at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. This consists in injecting bile salt into the vein. The bile salt used is bilirubin. It is known that in a certain length of time the liver converts a definite amount of bilirubin into bile. The test consists in injecting three times as much bilirubin as the liver ordinarily takes care of into the blood stream. Four hours later the blood is taken from the vein of the other arm and tested to see the amount of bilirubin present. If it has all been destroyed the liver can be said to be functionally normal.

Such tests as these are opening up a new chapter in our ability to estimate the condition of the body.

South African Legation Reception Marks 28th Anniversary of Union

Minister and Mrs. Close Welcome 700 Guests in Celebration of 28 Years as Dominion; Diplomatic Corps Well Represented.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Twenty-eight years ago four major provinces of South Africa joined their forces into a Dominion within the British Commonwealth of Nations. Yesterday, approximately 700 Washington residents called at the Legation of South Africa, shook hands with the Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close and lingered to enjoy their reception—all by way of celebrating the event.

The party, incidentally, was one of the last the Minister and Mrs. Close will give this season. The latter part of this month they will be off for an extended vacation in England, where they will take a seaside cottage for several weeks and have with them their daughter, Mrs. Wilfred Mann, who visited here not long ago.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Yesterday, the spacious, handsomely-furnished rooms of the legation were decorated in white, pink and dark red peonies, with here and there a vase of pink gladioli or a cluster of ferns. One of the most attractive homes in Washington, the legation was never more beautiful than yesterday, when the broad doors opening to balconies and the garden were flung open, and guests had one of the first opportunities of the season to linger outside and enjoy the sunshine.

The host and hostess greeted their guests in the drawing room. Mrs. Close was becomingly gowned in a beige crepe frock, fashioned with a floor-length skirt and long flowing sleeves and trimmed with an intricate pattern of beige braid.

From the drawing room to the library went the long line of guests, stopping in the latter room to sample the South African wine, or to enjoy a glass of orange or grape juice. The balcony off the library proved an especially popular spot, as did the long dining room, where a center table was loaded with choice viands. A towering vase of pink gladioli flanked by silver candelabra bearing yellow tapers decorated the table, where guests gathered in droves to enjoy sandwiches, French pastries, hot tea or iced coffee, ice cream and other dainties.

The guest list was drawn heavily from the diplomatic list, the Congressional Directory, Who's Who in Washington and the Social Register. It looked as if the entire town turned out for the event, certainly one of the largest afternoon parties of the season.

British Envoy Arrives Early

Among the earlier arrivals were the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, and Lady Lindsay. Several other members of the British Embassy also were among the guests; as were representatives of virtually every embassy and legation in Washington.

The Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, was seen in the crowd; also the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera; the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; the Ambassador of Equador and Senora Dona Blanca Puig de Alfaro, who was handsomely attired in black and white; the Italian Ambassador, Fluvio Suvich.

An especially popular guest was the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios, who recently returned from his homeland. With him was his wife, Senora Ginger de los Rios. Frau Herbert Scholz, of the German Embassy, was there; also Herr and Frau Wilhelm Tanneberg.

Also glimpsed in the crowd were the Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Hearsma de With, the latter wearing a stunning navy blue frock and a broad-brimmed white hat; the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne; the Minister of Finland, Eero Jarnefelt; the Greek Minister, Demetrios Siciliano; the Latvian Minister and Mme. Alfred Bilmanis; the Czech Minister and Mme. Vladimir Hurban, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi.

Well-Known 'Names' In Throng of Guests

Official and residential Washington was equally well represented in the throng. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was accompanied by Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith. The Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy were talking with a group of friends in the garden. There I saw also Mrs. Peyton March, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb; Col. and Mrs. Howard Davidson, Mrs. Herbert Howard, Senator Theodore Green, Miss Irene Boyle, Mrs. George Pettengill, Miss Carolyn Chantry, Miss Nancy Brereton and Hector Leguizamon, of the Argentine Embassy.

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, in a gray and white print frock and a small burgundy straw hat, was seen chatting with Mrs. Emil Hurja, whose beige suit and small hat was one of the smartest ensembles there. Mrs. Hamilton Fish was among the guests; also Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. Eugene Carusi and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Weem, accompanied by Miss Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, whose smart black and white print frock was set off with a wide brimmed straw hat.

Mrs. George Messersmith, wearing a snappy beige outfit with black accents, was with Mrs. Herbert Feis. Among others there were Senator Arthur Capper, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Churchill Candee, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. George Maurice Morris, Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, who was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Dorothy Tirrell; Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Blinn and scores of others.

Perhaps few of the many guests enjoying the party, however, knew the history of the occasion better than Ralph Totten, former United States Minister to the Union of South Africa. To a small but highly interested circle of guests gathered in a corner of the drawing room he told the story of how the four provinces—the Orange Free State, Natal and the Cape Colony—united in 1910 under one flag—the blue, orange and white banner that waved in front of the South Africa Legation yesterday. A lesson in history, a very fascinating lesson, it was.

Luncheon Given For Mrs. Wallace

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Fred C. Gilchrist, wife of Representative Gilchrist, of Iowa.

The party took place in the Carlton Hotel. A horseshoe table was banked in the center with ferns, through which the indirect lighting cast a soft glow on the centerpiece of peonies and snapdragons.

Mrs. Gilchrist wore an afternoon dress of shell-pink crepe, made with a bolero. Her large felt hat also was pink, and her accessories were white. Her daughter, Mrs. Mavis Allen, assisted in receiving.

Guests were Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wife of Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota; Mrs. Cassius C. Dowell, Mrs. Fred Bierman, Mrs. Vincent Harrington, Mrs. John W. Gwynne, and Mrs. Edward Clayton Eicher, whose husbands are members of the Iowa Congressional delegation.

Also, Mrs. A. Wier, Mrs. Gertrude Louis, Mrs. R. M. Evans, Mrs. Harlan Miller, Miss Marguerite Mullen, Mrs. C. William Ramseyer, Miss Mary La Follette, Mrs. Davis Weir, Mrs. Karl Stefan, Mrs. C. D. Case, Mrs. James D. LeCron, Mrs. E. A. Merritt, Mrs. Claude Porter and Mrs. Richard Wilson.

Mrs. Kirby Takes Apartment Here, Entertains Guest

Mrs. Kindleberger Kirby, who recently returned to Washington after an absence of some years, has taken an apartment at the Broadmoor. She will be remembered here as Miss Pauline Kindleberger and it was in Washington that she made her debut.

She has as her house guest Mrs. Kay Chilton Kelly, of Sacramento, Calif., for whom she has been giving a series of luncheons and will entertain at an at home on Sunday from 5 to 7 in honor of Mrs. Kelly.

Nuptials Set June 29 For Margot Garrett

Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett have issued invitations for the wedding of the former's daughter, Miss Margot Garrett, to Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler, of the Argentine Embassy.

The ceremony will take place at St. Matthew's Church at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June 29, and will be followed by a reception at the residence of the bride's parents on New Hampshire avenue.

Frasers Return.

Sir Colin Fraser and Lady Fraser, of Melbourne, Australia, are at the Carlton, having returned there yesterday after a brief visit to Williamsburg, Va.

Contentment at Uplands

Underwood & Underwood.

A new picture of Mrs. William Bankhead, wife of Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, Speaker of the House. Enthralled with "Uplands," their home on Foxall road, which they recently leased from Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, United States Minister to Norway, she and Representative Bankhead haven't bothered yet to think of spending the summer anywhere else. They most likely, however, will go down to Mobile for a little fishing now and then.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

HAVING seen the last of each other yesterday in an official capacity for several months to come, most of the Supreme Court justices will meet again in a purely social way on Saturday afternoon in a Pennsylvania garden. Six, and possibly seven of the nine are going to motor up to the Kimberton farm of their colleague, Justice Owen J. Roberts, for the wedding that day of his daughter, Elizabeth Roberts, to Charles Alfred Hamilton.

DUDLEY HARMON

The distinguished caravan will be headed by the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, and will include Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black, Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Justices Stanley Reed and Pierce Butler. Illness will prevent the presence of Justice Cardozo, and Justice and Mrs. Louis Brandeis include even weddings in the category of all the social affairs which they never, never attend. Justice McReynolds, who is now in the South, may go to Pennsylvania for the ceremony if he gets back in time.

This will be the first time the daughter of a Supreme Court Justice has gotten married in heaven knows when, so it is natural that the colleagues should be anxious to attend, even when it means motoring several hundred miles to do so.

• • • •

IN ADDITION to the Justices, a number of common, or garden variety of residents of the Capital, are planning to motor up on Saturday for the event. The bride-to-be, a talented painter, has both studied and exhibited at Studio House, and the director and Mrs. C. Law Watkins, with the assistant director, and Mrs. Robert Franklin Gates, will be present to see their former pupil say "I do."

Miss Anne Carter Greene, an erstwhile president of the Washington Junior League, is also among those going to the wedding. Others who will drive to "Bryncoed," the farm of the Roberts, are Mr. and Mrs. Meade Fletcher, Miss Helen Clifford, a Georgetown neighbor of the future bride, and Mr. and Mrs. L. M. C. Smith. Mrs. Smith and Miss Roberts share a love of painting.

Olivia and Isaac Stokes will go down from New York for the wedding, and others from Washington planning to attend are the Rev. and Mrs. Duncan Frazer, Mrs. William Mackall, Miss Eleanor Preston and Miss Rosalind Wright.

• • • •

BESIDES being an artist, Miss Roberts is a musician who practices on the piano two or three hours a day. For a time she studied at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Her future husband, whose father was a well-to-do Bridgeport businessman, likes hunting and fishing. Like his fiance, he is rather quiet. Miss Roberts is a very genuine sort of person and cared little for the more pompous side of Washington society. A tall, dark girl, she uses little make-up, dresses conservatively, running to tweeds, and liked to go for long solitary walks with her dog around Georgetown before leaving last month for Bryn Coed and marriage.

After their wedding, the couple will reside at Southport, Conn., near Bridgeport, where Mr. Hamilton is in business. Owing to mourning in the bridegroom's family, the wedding will be fairly small, and besides the Justices, those invited from Washington are mostly younger friends of Elizabeth's.

AND SPEAKING of weddings: Miss Anne Child, daughter of Mrs. Edmund W. Pavenstedt, will be a bridesmaid at the forthcoming wedding of Miss Joan Bass to Marshall Field, son of Mrs. Diego Suarez. Miss Child is a cousin of the future bride. The ceremony will take place on Monday, June 20, at Endean, the estate of Miss Bass' parents in East Walpole, Mass., between Boston and Providence. It will be a big event of the season for New York and Boston society.

NOTES OF SOCIETY

Official and Residential

Mme. Hirosi Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, will go to Hot Springs on June 15. She will be accompanied by their children.

• • • •

• • • •

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde will entertain at an informal dance June 8 in honor of Thomas Rogers Drake, of Columbia, S. C., who will arrive on Friday to visit him.

• • • •

Lieut. and Mrs. Alfred Stuart, of Coral Gables, Fla., are at the Wardman Park Hotel for several days.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Ruppert, of 4432 Reservoir road, spent the week-end at Spring Mountain House, Schwenkville, Pa., as did Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Gilbert, of Arlington, Va.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur DeTitta have as their guest at the Wardman Park Col. Jason S. Joy, of Los Angeles.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse M. Donaldson, of Washington, are at the Hotel Traymore in Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan L. Smith, of Salt Lake City, are at the Dodge Hotel.

• • • •

Now at the Hay-Adams House are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Miller, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Frank L. Nason, of Scituate, Mass.

• • • •

M. and Mme. Marcovici Cleja, of Paris, are at the Wardman Park Hotel while in Washington on a tour of the country.

• • • •

McNarys Move to Hotel; Plan Summer in Oregon

Senator and Mrs. Charles McNary have moved from the apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue, which they leased from Edward Gardner, to the Shoreham, where they will be until Congress adjourns. They will then leave for their ranch in Oregon where they will be for the summer.

Mr. Gardner and his niece, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, will take possession of their apartment today.

Amity Pact Signed By Lithuanian and Mexican Officials

The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, and the Minister of Lithuania, Povilas Zadeikis, yesterday signed a treaty of amity between their two countries. The purpose of the treaty is not only to establish diplomatic and consular services between the nations but represents an assurance of peace and friendship.

Dr. Jose Castro Villagran, director of the Juarez Hospital in Mexico, last evening presented a series of medical films at the Mexican Embassy. The audience was composed of prominent physicians of this city and their wives. Following the films Dr. Castillo Najera and Senora de Castillo Najera received at an informal reception.

On Monday, Dr. Villagran was entertained at a luncheon at the Embassy, at which the Ambassador and his wife were hosts. Among the guests were Dr. de Alba, of the Pan-American Union, and Mrs. de Alba; Dr. Tomas Cajigas and Mrs. Cajigas, the First Secretary of the Embassy and Senora de Fuentes, and the Third Secretary and Senora de Davila.

Miss Brundage Becomes Bride Of Dr. Creevey

Garden of Mrs. Lamont's Falls Church Estate Wedding Scene.

A wedding of wide interest in Washington, Virginia, New York and Illinois took place yesterday before a company of approximately 50 guests gathered in the garden of Mrs. Robert F. Lamont's estate in Falls Church, Va.

The bride was Miss Margaret Germaine Brundage, daughter of Mrs. Edward J. Brundage and the late Mr. Brundage, who was attorney general of Illinois. The bridegroom, Dr. Kennedy Creevey, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. George Mason Creevey, of New York.

At 4 o'clock the ceremony took place. The bride, who was given in marriage by her cousin, Chester Brundage, was becomingly gowned in an old-fashioned frock of white organdy, styled with a full skirt over hoops, puffed sleeves and a fitted bodice. She carried a bouquet of white roses and instead of the traditional tulle veil, she wore a wreath of white roses in her hair.

Her maid of honor was Miss Valerie Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hayden Harris, of Chicago. Other attendants were Miss Harriet Phillips, of Tarreytown-on-Hudson; Miss Ruth GHady, of New York, and Miss Jacqueline Brundage, sister of the bride. Charles Suhr, of Cleveland, was best man and ushers included Edward J. Brundage, jr., and Robert Brundage, brothers of the bride.

Following the garden ceremony, guests went to Mrs. Brundage's home, which adjoins that of Mrs. Lamont, where the wedding reception was held. Later the couple left for New York, whence they will sail today for a trip to Ireland. On their return they will make their home in Cambridge, N. Y., where Dr. Creevey is on the staff of a hospital.

Mrs. Smith Leaves With Miss Barrell After Visiting Here

Mrs. Tunstall Smith and her granddaughter, Miss Louise Barrell, of Baltimore, who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman over the week-end, have returned home.

Miss Elizabeth Biddle Hopkinson, of Philadelphia, and Miss Helen McPherson, of New York, who were also among the house guests of the Tuckermans from Friday throught Monday, left yesterday. The visitors were entertained by the Tuckermans at a dinner Saturday evening and a tea followed by a supper on Sunday.

De Chambruns Visit in Capital

Marquis Pierre de Chambrun and Marquise de Chambrun arrived in Washington yesterday from Cincinnati and will be at the Mayflower Hotel. Cincinnati is the former home of the Marquise, who is the daughter of Mrs. Bellamy Storer and a cousin, as well as the sister-in-law of the former Miss Clara Longworth, now the Countess Clara Longworth de Chambrun. The Marquise de Chambrun, who was Miss Margeret Rives Nichols, has been living in France for the past 40 years.

The visitors are accompanied by their elder son and daughter-in-law, Count and Countess Jean de Chambrun, who are making their first visit to the United States.

Marquis de Chambrun is a member of the French Senate and in order to resume his duties at an early date, he and his family will sail from New York, June 7. Marquise de Chambrun has for a long time devoted herself to charity in Paris and in Lozere. Outstanding among the projects she has sponsored is a preventorium for tuberculosis in Lozere.

Miss Elise Ripley, Mr. Kesmodel Wed

While a choir of 25 voices sang the wedding march, Miss Frances Elise Ripley was escorted down the aisle by her brother, Claiborn A. Ripley, at her marriage yesterday to the Rev. William Paul Kesmodel. The ceremony took place last evening at 8 o'clock at the Lewis Memorial Church. The Rev. John A. Trader officiated, with Dr. E. A. Sexsmith, president of the Maryland Conference of Methodist Churches, assisting.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Claiborn Henry Ripley, of this city, and the late Mr. Ripley. The bridegroom, who is now pastor of Walker's Chapel in Arlington, Va., is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Kesmodel, formerly of Baltimore, Md.

Miss Ripley, who was attired in white satin with a high cowl neckline, long sleeves and sweeping train, wore a veil of imported lace and carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

Miss Mae Kesmodel, of Baltimore, attended her as maid of honor and wore a gown of pink chiffon. Her flowers were pink rosebuds and blue delphinium. Miss June Pinner and Miss Betty Duncan, both of Washington, were the bridesmaids and were dressed in pink mousseline de soie. They also carried pink rosebuds and blue delphinium.

Dr. Lawrence Little, of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md., served as best man while the ushers were Don Kinney, of Washington and Charles Cuffley, of Baltimore.

Gay Party Honors Mrs. Williams On 75th Birthday Anniversary

Mrs. Leiter Entertains With Her Daughter and Her Son.

Still Washington's most energetic dowager, even at 75, Mrs. John R. Williams celebrated attainment of three quarters of a century yesterday at a large party given last evening by her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and her grandchildren, Thomas and Nancy Leiter.

The event took place in Mrs. Leiter's enormous stone mansion on Dupont Circle, and was preceded by a dinner for 30 guests. An additional 200, ranging from dignified diplomats to younger friends of Mr. and Miss Leiter, came in later.

The garden behind the Leiter home was gayly decorated with lanterns, and in spite of the coolness of the weather, many of the guests spent a large part of the evening there. Dancing, to the music of Meyer Davis' Orchestra, took place in the ballroom. A lavish supper—some of the food came all the way from Philadelphia—was served late in the evening. Decorations included masses of pink roses.

Guests Arrive Bearing Gifts

Many of the guests came bearing gifts to Mrs Williams, who finds time not only to attend social functions, but also to manage several large apartment houses, a club and a restaurant. One of the most amazing gifts was that presented by Mrs. Joseph Himes. Hers was a poem, lettered by hand on vellum, on the subject of the Anchorage, Moorings and Caravel, which Mrs. Williams owns. To carry out the nautical idea expressed in the names, the poem was enclosed in a little glass ship, topped off with an enormous bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Henry Miller and Mrs. Kenna Elkins gave Mrs. Leiter a pair of household ornaments, and Mrs. Ormsby McCammon accompanied her gift with several timely verses, in the writing of which she is an expert.

Several amusing stunts featured the evening's entertainment. One of the most original was a hidden microphone, from which came birthday greetings to Mrs. Williams from the King of England, the President of the French Republic, Mussolini, Hitler, Stalin and Pope Pius. Needless to say, the various voices broadcasting belonged to guests.

Among the dinner parties given before the reception was that at which Mr. and Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour entertained. Their guests, with the exception of Edward Gardner, were from the Virginia hunting country, where Thomas Leiter has a home and spends much of his time. In their party were Mr. and Mrs. William Eldon Doeller, who have taken a house at Narragansett, R. I., for the summer; Mr. and Mrs. Amory Carhart, who will summer at their home on Fishers Island; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Hinckley and Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins.

Guests at the reception included Mrs. Frederick Sterling, wife of the United States Minister to Latvia, and a daughter of Mrs. Williams, and Mrs. Houston Rawls, of New York, another daughter. Others there were Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Benning Spencer, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Wilkins, Mr. and Mrs. John Newbold, Mrs. Harry Kerr, the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold Sims, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour, Col. and Mrs. Godwin Ordway, Mrs. Abram Claude, Wallace LaRue, Eugene Ruckert and many more.

Guest of Honor Is Famous Capital Figure

In addition to her many business enterprises, Mrs. Williams takes an active part in local charity. She is chairman of the Thrift Shop, and contributes to five local charities: Child Welfare, the Children's Hospital, the Prenatal Clinic-Columbia Hospital, and the Junior League.

Mrs. Williams has lived in Washington for many years, and is the widow of an Army officer. She is a moving spirit of the smart Sulgrave Club, on Massachusetts avenue off Dupont circle, and organized the Friday Evening Supper Clubs there four years ago. She is also active in managing the series of three dances which are held there during the winter, and attended by smart Washington.

Her summers Mrs. Williams spends in Beverly on the North Shore of Massachusetts, where her daughter, Mrs. Leiter, also has a home. Known to hundreds here as "Ma," Mrs. Williams suffered a severe illness during the winter, but none of the guests last evening would have suspected it from her gay and youthful spirits.

Dinner in Honor Of the Stanleys

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Conard entertained at a dinner last evening at the Chevy Chase Club in honor of Capt. and Mrs. E. D. Stanley.

Their other guests were Capt. and Mrs. W. F. Zane, Capt. and Mrs. H. deF. Mel, Capt. and Mrs. E. A. Cobey, Capt. Frank Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Zimmerman and Mrs. C. Willard Hayes.

Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, who returned yesterday afternoon after spending the week-end in Richmond and at Virginia Beach, entertained at a small dinner at the Shoreham last evening.

Guests of honor were Representative and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, who will leave the latter part of this week for their home in Pocatello, Idaho. Also in the company were Representative and Mrs. William B. Barry.

Van Weedes to Visit Netherlands Envoy En Route to Rome

The Netherlands Minister and Mme. van Haersma de With will have as their house guests at the legation, from June 7 to June 10, Jonkheer and Mme M. W. van Weede. The Van Weedes are on their way to Rome, where he has been appointed as Secretary of the Netherlands Legation there.

They were until recently stationed in China, where Jonkheer van Weede represented his country as secretary in Pekin.

Marriage Is Announced.

Lieut. Col. Samuel L. Howard, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Howard announce the marriage of their daughter, Marianna Buckner, to Ralph Lunt Shepard, son of Mrs. Maurice Edwin Shearer and the late Maj. Ralph Lunt Shepard, U. S. M. C., on Friday, December 3, in Elkton, Md.

The Bradleys Hosts at Dinner

The retiring Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. F. C. Bradley entertained at a small dinner last evening in their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Their guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes, the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness of Sant'Orsola, Capt. and Mrs. Herbert S. Howard, Capt. and Mrs. Calvin Metz and Mrs. Ridley McLean.

Capt. and Mrs. Bradley will sail June 14 to return to England, where Capt. Bradley has been ordered for duty.

Y. W. C. A.'s Lodge Opens For Summer

24 Business Girls in First Group Moving in for Vacations.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Vacation Lodge of the Y. W. C. A. today will welcome 24 summer residents, the first of the business girls from Washington to move out for the season.

The lodge, which has been used during May for week-end house parties of various Y. W. C. A. groups and for several conferences was all in readiness yesterday for the coming of its summer "family". Miss Joy Cutler, who will be director and house mother this season, has been in charge since the opening of the lodge May 1.

Yesterday bowls of red and pink roses from the garden were on the tables in the large living room with its broad fireplace, beamed ceiling, and inviting wicker chairs. On the mantel was a vase with fragrant honeysuckle and great logs blazed in a cheery fire beneath.

On the screened porch where meals are served, there are brightly painted tables and chairs and on another part of the veranda are chairs and awings, making an out-of-door living room as attractive as that inside.

The lawn, sloping down to a little ravine, bordered by lilies and shaded by large willow trees, was warm with sunshine yesterday afternoon. There were benches and chairs in shaded spots a gnarled tree stump where the girls often sit and an artistic little bird bath which they built a few seasons ago and which now has ferns and rock plants thriving at its base. Back of the lodge are tennis courts and garden plots.

"Cora," the colored cook who had catered for the week-end parties at the lodge for the past five years, this summer will be there for the season—much to the gratification of the girls who are familiar with her cheese biscuits, lemon cream pies and other delicacies.

"There's just nothing Cora can't make," said Miss Cutler.

In addition to serving breakfasts and dinners for the regular summer family at the lodge, luncheon parties will be served to club groups who make reservations ahead. Already, for June, luncheons have been planned there by the Zonta Club, an Eastern Star chapter and three church groups.

Most of the girls who are moving out today are employed in the Government. Miss May L. Richards, who is among them, has been spending her summers at the lodge for the past seven years. Others who have been there for five seasons are Miss Grace Sexton, Miss Gladys Sime, Miss Mary Louise Brown and Miss Annie E. Sawyer.

Y. W. C. A. Opens Vacation Lodge, Summer Residence in Cherrydale

MISS JOY CUTLER, director of Vacation Lodge, summer residence of the Y. W. C. A. for business women, is shown by the fireplace in the living room which is a popular gathering place on cool evenings. Below is Mrs. Libby Burner, left, a member of the Xenos Club of the "Y. W.," watching Miss Louise Danforth, a member of the professional staff, filling the bird bath built by a group of girls a few years ago. They visited the lodge yesterday to see final preparations for the arrival of the party of summer guests today.

HOME ECONOMICS WOMEN IN BUSINESS will be addressed at their dinner meeting tonight at Brooke Farm Tea House by Miss Janet Bond, of London, one of the foremost home economists in business in England.

Miss Bond is on her first visit to America and landed in New York just a week ago, so her opportunity for comparison of things British and American has been brief. Her particular interest is in the use of canned goods by American housewives. Last October she became principal of the canned food advisory board of the Metal Box Co., of London, a new department created to render service to the canning industry and consumer.

She gives cookery demonstrations before women's organizations, prepares bulletins on canned foods, recipe books needed and is working to encourage more extensive use of canned foods generally.

In many places there exists prejudice and most English housewives serve things out of "tins" only in emergencies, says Miss Bond. A kitchen in connection with her bureau gives weekly demonstrations before women to whom invitations have been extended—home economics teachers and others interested.

Home economics women in England, with the exception of teachers, had no organization until recently when a Dietics Association was formed with about 75 members. There are comparatively few employed in business, but gas and electric companies are now engaging them for consumer service, to give cookery demonstrations such as are given through similar departments of the public utilities firms in America, she says.

From here Miss Bond will go to New York, to Chicago, and then to Pittsburgh where she will attend, with Miss Ruth Atwater, of Washington, the National Home Economics convention.

MRS. LYMAN B. SWORMSTEDT yesterday afternoon read an unpublished manuscript at the regular book hour of the Women's City Club. It was the story of the Smith Sisters, of Glastonbury, Conn., militant suffragists of the early nineteenth century whose fame, even in that era, spread throughout the country as a result of their stand for equal rights.

The manuscript was prepared by Mrs. Swormstedt's brother, Fremont Rider, librarian of Wesleyan University at Middletown, for an address he made last winter before the Twentieth Century Club here.

THE WOMEN'S AUXILIARY of the Disabled American Veterans will hold a card party at 822 Twentieth street northwest on Monday, at 8 p. m., under the direction of Mrs. Suzanne Miller, junior vice commander. Bridge and 500 will be played. The proceeds will be used for charitable purposes.

A regular meeting of the auxiliary will be held next Wednesday at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club.

75th Club Honors Mrs. Long At Final Party This Session

Mrs. Ellender and Mrs. Murdock, President and Past President, Are Hostesses at Home of Mrs. Walter Lowdermilk.

Mrs. Lewis Long, wife of Representative Long, of Sandwich, Ill., was guest of honor yesterday at a tea given by Mrs. Allen Ellender, wife of Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, and Mrs. John R. Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona, at the residence of Mrs. Walter C. Loudermilk, where Mrs. Murdock has lived for the Congressional season. Guests were members of the Seventy-fifth Club, of which Mrs. Ellender is president, and Mrs. Murdock, past president.

The affair was last of a series of parties the club has had and was the farewell of the membership to Mrs. Long, who will not return to Washington next year. Some of the members, who have already returned to their home States in anticipation of early adjournment of Congress, were unable to be present.

Mrs. L. L. Boyer, of Quincy, Ill., was in charge of the program, which included ensemble singing for which Mrs. Hugh Rigney, of Illinois, played, and also reading, by Mrs. Murdock, of poems from Representative Luther Patrick's book, 'Hope You're Livin' and Doin' Well." "Shadders" and "Yore Smile" were two of those she read. All were much on the style of James Whitcomb Riley and were received with warm applause by the club, of which Mrs. Patrick is a member.

Tea was served in the dining room at a table appointed with a Chinese tea service brought from the Orient by Mrs. Lowdermilk, who spent more than 20 years there. Last night she gave an address on her observations in China at a meeting in the chapel of the Methodist Building, held under auspices of the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Lowdermilk, Mrs. Suzanna Kernahan and Miss Ruby Rotzien assisted the hostess, as did Mrs. Harold G. Mosier, of Cleveland, who poured.

Among others there were Mrs. James Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes, of Delaware; Mrs. Vincent Harrington, of Iowa; Mrs. Aime J. Foand, of Rhode Island; Mrs. H. Leonard Allen, of Louisiana; Mrs. Arthur Aleshire, of Ohio; Mrs. John K. Griffith, of Louisiana; Mrs. Pete Jarman, of Alabama; Mrs. James A. Dixon, of Ohio; Mrs. Frank W. Towey, New Jersey; Mrs. Wade Kitchens, Arkansas; Mrs. Charles H. Leavy, Washington; Mrs. John Luecke, Michigan; Mrs. L. F. Arnold, Illinois; Mrs. C. R. Clason, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Jerry O'Connell, of Montana; Mrs. Clyde H. Smith, of Maine; Mrs. Harry R. Sheppard, of California, and Mrs. T. J. Wand, of the District, who was not a club member.

Mrs. Thorpe Sailing.

Mrs. George Thorpe will sail this evening on the New York for Europe. She will spend most of the summer with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Pack, in Warsaw. Mr. Pack is a member of the British Embassy staff there.

Class of 10 Moose Candidates To Be Named for Grand Officer

A class of ten candidates to be intiated June 10 by Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, will be named in honor of Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder, who has completed her tenth year in that position. Announcement of the naming of the class in her honor was made last night by Mrs. Howard J. Clark, chairman of membership, at a meeting of her committee.

Miss Smith is in charge of the executive offices of the national organization, Women of the Moose, located here in the National Bank of Washington Building, where she supervises activities of the 900 Chapters throughout the United States, Canada and Alaska.

In her 10 years as recorder, she has developed a program of committee activities which has been adopted by most of the chapters to carry Mooseheart standards with their homes and communities. Before becoming grand recorder, Miss Smith for several years was affiliated with the Social Service Department at Mooseheart.

Prior to devoting her full time to the Moose Fraternity, Miss Smith served as superintendent of employment at Wilmington, Del., associated with the Pierre duPont Philanthropies, and superintended the District of Columbia employment office of the Department of Labor. She did Red Cross work in the World War, for which she was awarded a service medal.

A native of Indianapolis, Miss Smith was the first woman to serve as assistant secretary of the upper house of the Indiana General Assembly. Here she was always particularly interested in measures for welfare of children, and helped to bring about passage of a bill establishing the James Whitcomb Riley Hospital for Crippled Children at Indianapolis. In addition to her interest in the Women of the Moose, Miss Smith is a member of the Eastern Star, Business and Professional Women's Club, American Legion Auxiliary and a number of other social and fraternal organizations.

Initiation of the class in her honor will be conducted at Moose Hall under supervision of Mrs. Anna Wagner, ritualistic chairman.

Aero Club's Luncheon To Honor Army Fliers

The Aero Club of Washington will give a luncheon tomorrow in honor of Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, Air Corps, U. S. A., and 11 other officers who accompanied him on the recent good-will flight of six flying fortresses to South America. The affair originally was scheduled for May 26 and was postponed because of bad flying weather. It will be held in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel at 12:15 p. m.

Col. Olds will describe the flight and some of the experiences of the fliers and pictures will be shown.

Mathis Club Plans Tea.

The Mathis Club will give a silver tea Sunday from 3 to 5:30 on the grounds of Holy Cross Seminary. Mrs. Ann E. Murphy will be assisted by Mrs. Edward A. Cassady, president of the club, and her committee. The tea has become an annual affair for the benefit of a fund for the propagation of the faith in India.

McClaytons Plan Pen Women Party

Mr. and Mrs. William R. McClayton will entertain at a garden party and supper at their home in Baltimore Sunday afternoon, in honor of the newly elected president of the Chevy Chase branch of the National League of American Pen Woman, Mrs. Heber Votaw, sister of the late President Harding.

Other guests will be the newly elected national president of the league, Mrs. Joseph Auslander, and Mr. Auslander; Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mayor and Mrs. Howard Jackson, the State regent for Marylnad of the D. A. R., Mrs. Wilbur Blakeslee, and Mr. Blakeslee; Maj. and Mrs. William H. Crane, and Mrs. Margie Luckett, author of "Prominent Women of Maryland."

The host and hostess will be assisted by their aunt, Mrs. Emma W. P. Slack, past president of the branch; Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, first president and organizer of the branch; Mrs. C. C. Calhoun, Miss Viola Offutt, Mrs. A. Pearl McPherson, past president, and Mrs. Hester Beall Provenson, first vice president, who will give several readings.

Mrs. Thomas Cajigas will have charge of the program for the afternoon. Mrs. Calhoun will present the president's pin and have charge of installation of the new president.

P.-T. A. Safety Drive Praised

The safety education program of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Pearl Clark, was given recognition yesterday morning in a Nation-wide broadcast on the Farm and Home Hour of the Department of Agriculture. The boy patrols, driving courses given in the high schools and the school traffic clubs also were commended.

Mrs. Clark, who has promoted an active program on safety for the District of Columbia P.-T. A.'s, is of the opinion many children are more "safety conscious" than are adults. In March she arranged a safety program at the Electric Institute where morning and afternoon sessions were held with members of parent-teacher associations from all schools of the city attending. The speakers included Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the woman's safety committee of the American Automobile Association; M. O. Eldridge, of the Vehicular Department; Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic director of the Metropolitan Police Department.

The District of Columbia Motor Club of the American Automobile Association co-operates with the parent-teacher associations in providing safety films and speakers for their programs and also works with the safety committee of the Board of Education and the Metropolitan Police in showing the films before student groups and supplying to the schools posters and graded lessons for the use of teachers in giving safety instruction. It has supplied 35,000 of these to Washington schools in the past year and additional ones, prepared especially for rural areas, to schools in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

In all of the instruction emphasis is placed on the grown-up's setting the child a good example by observing the rules himself.

2 Fetes Planned By Sigma Kappa

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority will close the season's activities with a buffet supper at the Congressional Country Club Monday, and a dinner dance at the Army and Navy Country Club, Thursday of next week. The committee arranging for the first event includes Mrs. Barton W. Richwine, Dr. Ella M. A. Enlows, Miss Violet Austin, Mrs. J. Onsby Smith and Mrs. Donald Saunders. The dinner is in charge of Mrs. Harlow McCord.

New officers are: Mrs. J. Earl Bassett, president; Mrs. George C. Rodgers, vice president; Mrs. Donald Saunders, secretary; Miss Virginia Mitchell Smithson, treasurer; Mrs. Bernard F. Burdick, registrar; Mrs. Augustus S. Goodyear, Triangle correspondent; Miss Lelia Hardell, Panhellenic delegate, and Miss Helen Carty Jones, alternate.

Sigma Kappa was founded 64 years ago at Colby College, Waterville, Me., and now has 45 college chapters and 58 alumnae chapters in the United States and Canada. Its international philanthropy consists in the educational work of the Maine Seacoast Mission. This was established at Bar Harbor in 1905 and was encouraged by such leaders as the late Lyman Abbott and Henry Van Dyke. It ministers to people living along the coast of Maine, including those who live in lighthouses, Coast Guard stations and on small islands.

The Washington alumnae chapter was organized in 1908, the late Mrs. George Otis Smith serving as its first president. Other past presidents include Miss Marion Brooks, Mrs. Augustus S. Goodyear, Mrs. James Riehl Arnold, Mrs. Richard M. Wick, daughter of the late Brig. Gen. Mark L. Hersey, and now grand president of the sorority; Mrs. Helen Coburn Smith Fawcett, Miss Ruth Major, Miss Helen Carthy Jones and Mrs. Charles E. Krey.

Treasury Mural Caricatures Art For Postoffice

'All in Fun,' Declares Artist Harold Weston; Morgenthau Approves.

The Treasury Department, whose art projects have been joshed and subjected to fiery controversy, has beaten the kidders to the draw in its latest group of mural paintings.

Unveiled yesterday, before the approving eyes of Secretary Morgenthau and a host of dignitaries, one mural panel in the lobby of the Federal Warehouse disclosed a Lady Justice with her blindfold askew and another panel, burlesquing the celebrated Indians-scalping-ladies painting in the Postoffice Building, showed an unclad damsel lying prostrate as a frontiersman draws a bead on a redskin.

Harold Weston, well-known artist from St. Huberts, N. Y., painted the series of 22 murals, which illustrate the far-flung and varied activities of the Treasury's Procurement Division, parent agency of the department's painting and sculpture section.

"It's all in good fun," Artist Weston explained.

The Indian-scalping mural unveiled several months ago at the Postoffice Department evoked a national controversy over both its historical accuracy and its exposure of epidermis.

Another mural, also executed under the Treasury's painting and sculpture section, stirred a row because Artist Rockwell Kent inserted legend which allegedly urged the Puerto Ricans to revolt. Still another group of murals, in the Justice Building, which stirred wide comment was that by George Biddle, about life in tenements and sweatshops.

Secretary Morgenthau, in a short informal speech, praised Mr. Weston's work and laughingly accepted his explanation of the unconventional Lady Justice and the postoffice travesty. The latter shows a self-portrait of Mr. Weston, who is depicted as the painter working on the mural.

Warehouse Murals 'Kid' Treasury

Polite joshing of Treasury Department murals was undertaken by Artist Harold Weston in the series of murals unveiled yesterday in the Federal Warehouse. The above mural is a take-off on a Postoffice Department Building mural of Indians scalping nudes. The artist on the scaffolding is Weston's self-portrait.

This mural is a "caricature" of a Justice Department mural. It shows a sculptor chiseling out a Justice who has one eye peeking from beneath her symbolical blindfold. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau laughed heartily at the unveiling ceremony. The satirical murals can be regarded as a retort to the joshing the Treasury Department has received on more serious projects.

Rural Indiana Girl Wins U. S. Spelling Title

The little red schoolhouse won out over its city cousins yesterday when 12-year old Marian Richardson of Franklin Township, Ind., won the national spelling championship here.

Marian, who attends a one-room, 36-pupil school in Floyd County, defeated 21 fellow contestants, most of them from metropolitan schools. The bronze plaque and $500 check went to her for the correct spelling of "sanitarium."

The runner-up, Jean Pierce, of Kenmore Junior High School, Buffalo, N. Y., had to be content with the $300 second prize. She went down on "pronunciation," putting an "o" in the second syllable.

The finals of the fourteenth annual contest were held in the auditorium of the National Museum and were broadcast nationally over the Columbia network. Entrants were selected after months of preliminary contests among 2,000,000 grade school pupils under the auspices of newspaper in 16 States.

The new champion, who has long blond curls and fair skin, retained her composure as photographers and reporters swarmed about her and admiring spectators pleaded for her autograph.

She announced she would postpone her decision as to the spending of her prize money until she returns with her mother to their Indiana farm. Her father, Charles Richardson, a contact man with the Soil Conservation project at New Castle, was unable to come East for the finals.

Marian may have inherited her talent, since both her mother and father are former school teachers.

"Certainly I can spell," Mrs. Richardson said yesterday, "but don't put me in a contest right now."

She acts as Marian's trainer, often taking her out of school for several months of home instruction. Her daughter will enter eighth grade in the fall.

Downcast faces and a few tears were in evidence among the other contestants as Marian and Jean were given their prizes. Probably the saddest were Getty Glenn, of Atlanta, Ga., who lost out in the finals by misspelling "protocol," and Billy Sampson, of Memphis, Tenn., who was eliminated during the last half-hour by "proletariat."

No rabbits' feet or four-leaf clovers appeared during the bee. June Gumerson, of Detroit, tried to improve her luck by crossing herself and praying between each round, but her piety was unavailing when she came up against "otiose." She spelled it as it is pronounced, "oclous."

Eleven-year-old Bettie Ashton, of Orange, Va., youngest of the entrants, also had pronunciation trouble. She spelled "posterior" with a Southern accent, and it went into the microphone as "posteriah."

Other words which tripped the young spellers included acquaintance, perspiration, elegy, drunkenness, benefited, cannonade, connubial, seditious, bulletin, temperament, twelfth, authoritative and malevolent.

Knows How to Spell Pronunciation

Brig. Gen. Davis, Military School Head, Dies at 73

Cornwall-on-Hudson, N. Y., May 31 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Milton Fennimore Davis, 73, president of the New York Military Academy and noted as a mountain climber, died today after an illness of several months. He had been associated with the academy since 1909.

He saw action in the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection, receiving the Silver Star citation for gallantry in action against the Spanish forces at Santiago, Cuba, July 1, 1898.

He was executive officer of the Infantry and Cavalry School at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., from 1903 to 1907, and during the World War chief of staff in the air service, receiving the Distinguished Service Medal after the war.

Surviving are his wife, the former Elizabeth Aitkon Hall, two daughters, Mrs. Frank A. Pattillo, of Cornwall-on-Hudson, and Mrs. Morton Starr Cressy, of Plainfield, N. J., and a son, Milton F. Davis, jr.

Col. P. J. Hennessey Dies in San Antonio

Col. Peter J. Hennessey, 60, United States Army, retired, died yesterday in San Antonio, Tex.

A native of London, England, he enlisted in the Army during the Spanish-American War and was commissioned a second lieutenant of Cavalry three years later.

He was graduated from the Infantry-Cavalry School, Army Signal School, Cavalry School, field officers' course, School of the Line, Command and General Staff School and the Army War College. He attained the rank of colonel in 1918.

Col. Hennessey is survived by his wife, Mrs. Blanche T. Hennessey, of San Antonio.

Higher Judges Get Extra Court Space

District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday announced that the Commissioners had agreed to permit the Department of Justice to make use of three of four extra courtroom suites in the new Police Court Building.

It is not know exactly what use the department will make of the space. But a bill has been passed adding three judges to the District Court. District Attorney David A. Pine has requested use of one of the rooms for a grand jury room.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THE WHITE HOUSE LETS DOWN ITS HAIR.

It's the night of one of the more democratic, less starchy parties at the White House, the last big party of the season . . . Some 1,650 are dropping in for a handshake, a glass of lemonade or beer and a whirl around the dance floor, and another 500 or so who asked for invitations couldn't be squeezed in.

* * * *

John Roosevelt
. . . great kidder

Tonight it's mostly taxicabs (30 or 40 cents from anywhere in Washington) rolling up the curving east driveway down the narrow street between the Treasury and White House; only a few limousines with chauffeurs, some of them in tweed caps . . . A few timid souls disembark at the outer curb in the soft rain and walk their ladies up. One or two seem to have arrived on bicycles.

* * * *

They wait a while downstairs, in what's the basement if you look at the house from the north, or the first floor viewed from the lower slope to the south . . . Then at 9 o'clock they file up to shake the hand of Mrs. Roosevelt, who is standing quite alone in the central foyer on the main floor.

"—charge of the light brigade"

The President has changed from his dinner jacket to a white suit for comfort . . . It's warm, and the men are congratulating themselves that at this party they can—and do—wear anything . . . Their clothes run the gamut from white tie and tails through black or white dinner jackets to sport coats and white pants . . . Tonight there aren't many white kid gloves, nor any gold braid, and how the plebeians miss it.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt is shaking hands heartily tonight, with a full grip, as he sits in his plain red armchair at one end of the East Room . . . He is half surrounded by self-conscious ladies, also sitting and watching the dancers. Against the wall stand a few stalwart fellows.

* * * *

At the far end sits the orchestra on a platform 18 inches high, flanked by the golden piano . . . One of its final appearances . . . Even the ornate piano seems relaxed tonight, and is doing its bit of gentle swing and familiar tunes . . . Around the room the wallflowers are two deep, politely ogling the dancers under the chandeliers, penetratingly, intently . . . Most of the young wives have recovered from their first attack of self-consciousness, and are being gay in the White House.

* * * *

Some of the cannier guests are making for the south veranda to cool off around the lemonade bowl . . . There's a muttering—where's the beer? . . . The wind is blowing in the awnings, and a spray of rain against the white dresses

* * * *

The Secretary of War is wearing a white dinner jacket; the Secretaries of State and Agriculture are in discreet black; the Attorney General is comfortable and jovial in white linen, and chatting about his golf partner, Bobby Jones . . . Someone has discovered the beer at last—just inside the main front door, flanked by plates of rye bread and sliced salami. The front foyer is not its usual austere, somnolent calm—not quite a brawl, either; but the muscular young men are sworn to bring their wives some beer. Old colored servants are passing cigarettes.

"—John jollies his Mommie"

"Supper is served in the State Dining Room!"

There's a swift movement westward . . . The doors are still closed . . . When they open, those behind push those in front toward the great table like a flying wedge . . . The first wave snatches the already filled plates and retreats.

* * * *

On each plate is some excellent chicken salad, fortified by a roll, pickle and potato chips . . . Men drag their food and their women off to their favorite corners, as they did 10,000 years ago . . . Some choose the damp roof terrace opening off the East Room; others the portico, the blue, green and red rooms, the corridor, the foyer; others the white tables under the great Jackson magnolia, near the walk that leads to the swimming pool . . . At the far end an officer in uniform is guarding the door to the executive offices, where someone is dusting the desks, just visible through the lighted windows.

* * * *

A few hardy souls are fetching dishes of ice cream and cake and coffee back to their ladies, and some are exploring the wet grass in the shadows under the great old trees . . . No party this year has lasted so late; it is 1 o'clock, and the irrepressible John Roosevelt is teasing his mother to dance a flea hop, to the delight of the guests . . . The President has gone upstairs—around 11 o'clock . . . Groups are drifting off to the clubs and cocktail lounges for a nightcap; the White House has let its hair down tonight.

Presbyterians Mark 70th Year

R. P. Clarke (left), treasurer of the Central Presbyterian Church for 48 years, greets Thomas C. Barr, first to be baptized by the church on May 31, 1868, the day of its organization. They were among veteran members at the church's seventieth anniversary celebration last night.

Central Presbyterian Marks 70th Anniversary of Founding

Church Wilson Attended Held Its Half-Century Jubilee While He Was President; Has Had But Two Pastors.

Leaves of many calendars fluttered backward last night as historic Central Presbyterian Church, where President Wilson worshiped in the troubled, dark days of the World War, celebrated its seventieth birthday.

It was the first jubilee the church had held since a score of years ago, on the last day of May, 1918—a jubilee President Wilson, bowed with war-time cares, attended.

The life of the church, at Sixteenth and Irving streets northwest, was sketched by its pastor, the Rev. James H. Taylor, who ascended the pulpit for the first time in 1906 and became the good friend of President Wilson.

Union General a Founder.

As more than 500 men and women listened, Dr. Taylor told of the beginnings of the church, back in 1868, in another era close to war, when, with the aid of the one-time Union general, Thomas Ewing, the Rev. A. W. Pitzer conducted the first sermon in a room in the old Columbian Law Building on Fifth street northwest, between D and E streets.

He traced the growth of the church, under the leadership of Dr. Pitzer, who died in 1927 at the age of 93. A lot on the corner of Third and I streets northwest was obtained and there rose the first church, fully completed in 1885.

How President Wilson laid the cornerstone of the present church in December, 1913, and attended services regularly through his eight years in the White House was described.

Many Pastors Present.

History of the church was fitted together by various members who recalled it at different stages, particularly when President Wilson attended.

Participating in the program were the Rev. W. L. Darby, of the Washington Federation of Churches, who extended greetings; the Rev. John Scott Johnson, the Rev. John H. Bowman, the Rev. Cecil M. Brown, the Rev. Alexander J. McKelway and the Rev. Wade H. Allison, who have joined the ministry from the church; Clyde H. DuBose, candidate for the ministry; the Rev. H. W. Shannon, the Rev. Fred V. Poag, the Rev. Robert McFerran Crowe and the Rev. William Mansell, who have helped in the pastoral work of the church, and R. Clyde Douglass, N. P. Farrior, Dr. and Mrs. William Hollister, Miss Florence Kooi, Miss Carolyn Mathews, Mrs. Posey Lester Shelor, Miss Lucy E. Steele and Mrs. N. G. Stevens, who have entered mission work. Miss Katheryne L. Thompson, who also became a missionary, still is in the Chinese war zone.

Central Presbyterian Church, one of the outstanding of its denomination in the country, has had but two pastors, Dr. Pitzer and Dr. Taylor, who took over Dr. Pitzer's work when the former became pastor emeritus in 1906.

Oldest Member Attends.

Bright-eyed at the celebration last night was Thomas Barr, 71, of 4314 Thirteenth place northeast, the oldest member of the church in point of service. He was the first person baptized there by Dr. Pitzer, becoming a member at the age of 1, in 1868.

"Of course, I don't remember much about it, but I pretend I do," he laughed last night. "I say I recall my long dress and all of that. President Cleveland would have come into our congregation, I think, if we hadn't had opera chairs in those days, and they hadn't been uncomfortable for him."

Another honored guest last night was Rufus P. Clarke, 70, of 1823 Phelps place, for 48 years treasurer of the church, who retired only a few months ago.

Roosevelt Signs Act Providing 4 New D.C. Judges

20 More Positions Created on Federal Benches Throughout U. S.

Appointment of four additional judges for the District before Congress adjourns was made possible yesterday when President Roosevelt signed the omnibus judgeship bill providing for 20 new judges throughout the Federal judicial system.

Under the new law the President may name three new judges to the United States District Court and one additional justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District.

Four other additional circuit court judges and 12 new district judges also are provided.

The legislation follows recommendations of the judicial conference and is intended to relieve congestion in court dockets, particularly in jury trials in the district court here.

New judgeships are authorized for each of the following circuits:

Second, embracing States of Vermont, Connecticut, New York; Fifth, including Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and the Canal Zone; Sixth, including Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee; Seventh, including Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

District judges to be appointed include one for each of the following districts:

Western Louisiana, southern Texas, eastern Michigan, western Washington, northern Illinois, western Virginia, southern California, northern California, southern New York, Massachusetts and combinations of the Eastern and Western districts of Arkansas and Eastern and Middle districts of Tennessee.

Callahan in Senate Race.

Charles H. Pierce Is Retired After 44 Years in Patent Office

Charles H. Pierce was retired yesterday from the Patent Office, where he served since September 10, 1894, and intends spending his leisure years cultivating a 20-acre tract near Baileys Crossroads—a big job, since 7 of the acres are now in honeysuckle and 13 overgrown with poison ivy.

His fellow workers tendered him a banquet last night at the Burlington Hotel, giving him a gold watch and pipe set. His work was praised by Commissioner of Patents Conway P. Coe and Patents Solicitor R. F. Whitehead.

Peirce was born in Moira, N. Y., on May 31, 1867, and spent his early boyhood at New Market, Tenn., where his father was a minister. Completing grade and high school, Pierce attended East Tennessee Wesleyan College and Wesleyan College at Middleton, Conn. Thereafter, he taught school, handled construction contracts and served four years in the Internal Revenue service at Nashville.

Following his appointment to the Patent Office in 1894, he studied at the old Columbian College (now George Washington University), in preparation for the civil service examination for assistant patent examiner. He was appointed fourth assistant examiner on July 13, 1898, in Division 1, and examined the agricultural implement arts. Promotion to first assistant examiner came on July 1, 1907, and eight years later to law examiner.

As law examiner, Pierce passed upon the propriety of requirements for division, and when on June 4, 1921, he was made classification examiner, he retained jurisdiction of divisional requirements. Much of the law on the highly controversial questions of divisions was crystallized during Pierce's tenure of office.

Few Sailors Enrolled by Reserve Unit

By Edward T. Folliard

The United States Navy is having trouble enrolling sailors in its Merchant Marine Naval Reserve, it was learned yesterday. Last summer plans were announced for building up a reserve of 5,000 officers and 35,000 men. Thus far, though there are over 3,400 officers, only 79 men have enrolled.

This leaves the United States with by far the weakest merchant marine naval reserve among the maritime powers of the world.

Government representatives who have made inquiries on the waterfront say that America's merchant sailors have been told over and over again by Communists in their unions that they would be used as strikebreakers if they joined the Naval Reserve.

Navy Denies Charge.

Navy recruiting officers are seeking to explode this argument. They are pointing out that Uncle Sam wants to enroll sailors purely for national defense purposes; to have them ready to serve in time of war, when the Navy would take over merchant ships.

Senate and House conferees on a bill to amend the 1936 Merchant Marine act were reported yesterday to be deadlocked on a provision to provide Government training for merchant marine sailors.

Certain maritime unions have fought this proposal from the outset, on the ground that there already were too many sailors and that the training plan was designed to destroy the unions.

Kennedy Urged Training.

Joseph P. Kennedy, when he was chairman of the Maritime Commission, urged Congress to authorize a plan whereby the Coast Guard would train 500 young Americans each year for service in the merchant marine.

Harry Lundeberg, secretary-treasurer of the Sailors of the Union, denounced the plan. He said the Coast Guard "would instill into them (the sailors) a certain spirit of loyalty calculated to outweigh any selfish interest." The training ships, he said, would merely turn out "finks," seagoing term for "scab" or strikebreaker.

The House Merchant Marine Committee, heeding the arguments of C. I. O. representatives, threw out the training plan. The Senate Commerce Committee eliminated the language naming the Coast Guard, but provided that the Maritime Commission be authorized to set up a system of training in conjunction with "other governmental agencies."

That is one of the items in the bill that is now keeping the Senate and House conferees from reaching an agreement. The conferees will meet again tomorrow.

Study Is Planned.

Representative Schuyler Otis Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the House Merchant Marine Committee, yesterday made plans to continue a study of merchant marine problems after Congress adjourns.

He asked Chairman O'Connor, of the House Rules Committee, to approve a resolution that would give the Merchant Marine Committee authority to sit during the recess.

"In the merchant marine field alone," Bland said, "the study will be directed to items such as costs of ship construction at home and abroad; training of seamen; discipline on ships; efficiency of licensed and unlicensed personnel; mediation; development of trade routes, and a survey of the activities of the Maritime Commission, expenditures, plans, policies, and so forth.

"In the item of labor problems alone, it is believed that the existence of the authority will have a salutary effect."

G. J. Vermillion Is Killed by Auto In West Virginia

A holiday at the races ended fatally for George Joseph Vermillion, 35-year-old Tax Assessor's office employe, who died instantly Monday night when struck by an automobile a mile east of Charles Town, W. Va. His body was identified yesterday by his brother, Stephen Vermillion.

Mr. Vermillion lived at 1029 Tenth street northeast.

Authorities believe Mr. Vermillion missed his train and started to make his way home. He was struck by a car driven by G. W. Ginger, of Baltimore. A coroner's jury impaneled by Jefferson County Justice Garland H. Moore exonerated Ginger of responsibility in the case.

G.P.O. Employe Retires After 45 Years' Service

20 Graduated By Georgetown Nursing School

Bessie Ann Glembocki, Catherine M. Lang Win Awards.

"You have chosen a noble vocation," the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, told the 20 young women graduates of the Georgetown Hospital Training School of Nursing yesterday.

Sister Mary Euphrasia, O. S. F., director of the school, presented the 1938 graduating class at the annual commencement exercises in Gaston Hall, attended by members of the hospital staff and many friends. A surprise of the program was the awarding of two prizes by the Rev. David V. McCauley, S. J., regent of the School of Medicine, which has supervision over the hospital.

The honored students were Miss Bessie Ann Glembocki, of New York, who received a prize for general efficiency, and Miss Catherine Mary Lang, of Virginia, to whom was awarded a prize for the development of leadership in Catholic action.

Addresses were made by Dr. William J. Stanton, of the hospital stff, and Dr. O'Leary. Both paid tributes to the Sisters of St. Francis who have administered the hospital and the school from the beginning.

Dr. O'Leary, who presented the diplomas, reminded the young women that the world today is torn by strife and suffering. "The church," he said, "is eager to prepare nurses to go forth to alleviate sorrow and bring an end to pain."

Class of 34 Girls Given Diplomas By Gunston Hall

Thirty-four girls were graduated from Gunston Hall at exercises yesterday. The commencement address was delivered by the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington Cathedral.

Schinnerer Feted At End of 45 Yrs. In Printing Office

The retirement of William Schinnerer after 45 years' service in the Government Printing Office was marked last night by ceremonies in the Congressional Record and linotype section, where he has been night foreman since 1933.

All of the 149 employes gathered around to watch Public Printer Augustus E. Giegengack present a testimonial. Schinnerer, who replied with a brief speech of thanks, was accompanied by his wife and two sisters, Mrs. Edna Dodge and Mrs. Maydee Lassen.

Schinnerer started his typographical career as the first printer's devil for the Memphis Commercial Appeal in 1889. When he came to Washington four years later, the G. P. O. was located in the old building at North Capitol and H streets. All type was set by hand.

During the World War, he was foreman. He has supervised some of the largest editions in the history of the Congressional Record. He lives at 3637 Warren street northwest.

D. C. to Reject City Auto Lots As Too Costly

Dirksen Parking Scheme Would Take 40 Cts. a Day, Officials Hold.

The municipal parking lost scheme of Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, has struck a snag at the District Building, it was learned yesterday, and his bill will die with the adjournment of Congress.

A special committee of District officials named by the Commissioners has found that the city would have to charge about 40 cents a day per car in order to keep out of the red on such a proposition.

Dirksen had estimated the municipal parking lots could be operated profitably for the District at 10 or 15 cents a day per car.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways and chairman of the committee, declined to discuss the committee's findings so far but said it will require several more months to gather data on the proposal. From another source it was learned the committee is convinced the Dirksen scheme is unworkable here.

High assessments and even higher prices on land in the business district would require at least a 40-cent charge, it was said, to repay the District, what it would lose in taxes.

The committee doubts parking lots outside the congested area would be of any great value.

Dirksen's measure authorized the Commissioners to acquire the land by purchase or condemnation but made no provision for funds.

Alvin Q. Ehrlich, president of the Advertising Club of Washington, and other newly-elected officers will be inaugurated today at the Raleigh Hotel.

The ceremonies, scheduled to begin at 12:15 p. m. in the clubrooms at the hotel, will precede a luncheon in the Queen Elizabeth Room at 12:30.

3,500 Expected For Adventists' 10-Day Meeting

Potomac Conference to Start Tomorrow at Takoma Park.

Nearly 3,500 persons representing 48 churches of the Seventh Day Adventist faith are expected at the opening of the annual Potomac Conference, tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Washington Sanitarium, Flower and Erie avenues, Takoma Park, Md.

Several hundred families have already arrived from Virginia and parts of Maryland for the 10-day meeting.

Election of officers for two years will take place during the sessions. There will be more than 100 delegates from the Washington Missionary College Church and the Takoma Park Church.

Two missionaries from India, A. E. Nelson and O. A. Skau, will speak at various meetings. Special programs have been arranged for the young people, led by Daniel A. Ochs, of the young people's department of the General Conference.

Steen Rasmussen, head of the home missionary department, who has just completed an extended tour of Europe, will give accounts of situation abroad.

Principal speakers scheduled for tomorrow night are: The Rev. J. L. McElhaney, president of the General Conference; H. H. Votaw, director of religious liberty and brother-in-law of President Warren Harding; H. J. Detwiler, head of the Columbia Union Conference, and A. W. MacNeil, president of the Potomac Conference.

Services will be held daily at 6 a. m. with meetings at 9:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.

$117 Traffic Bond Mostly in Nickels, Irks Police Court

Policemen and Police Court officials will be just as glad if they never see another nickel.

They've been counting nickels ever since Sunday, when Morris Cohen, 16 Third street southeast, posted $117 collateral on speeding and parking charges. The money, borrowed from a friend, arrived at the Twelfth Precinct in a large sack.

Policeman Donald Siegrist counted the money three times. The first time he found it 14 nickels short, the second time 10 short and the third time 4 short. So he put four nickels from his pocket in the sack to save a recount.

Sen. Logan Deplores War On Religion

Kentuckian Speaks at Annual Banquet of Columbia College.

Says America Must Train Teachers of Christianity.

With Japan, Russia and Germany being taught to hate Christianity, those who must be depended upon to lift high the banners of the Christian religion must be found in America and England, asserted Senator Marvel M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, in an address last evening at the eleventh annual banquet of the Columbia College of Christian Education, held at the Y. W. C. A.

Citing the need of teachers of Christian education, and lauding the college for its efforts in that field, he told the diners that "the world is hungering and thirsting for religion and there is no one to teach them." We teach men how to become great lawyers, teachers of secular education and doctors, and they all have their place, he said, but such instruction is insignificant compared to the real, elemental thing that a Christian brings to people with whom he comes in contact—the gift of eternal life.

A highlight of the dinner was the election to the institution's "hall of fame" of Mrs. Ida A. Fiske, of Arlington, Va., who was presented with a framed expression of appreciation for having contributed the outstanding service in promotion of the school during the past year.

Dr. Elsie Wade Stone, founder and president of the college, who presided over the dinner, conducted the installation of the new officers of the student assembly. Music was contributed by Miss Martha Isaacson, Miss Harriet Staley, Mrs. Charles C. Haig and Culvin S. Totten. Dr. E. E. Richardson pronounced the benediction.

Special guests included Dr. and Mrs. R. W. White, Irving L. Koch, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Baldwin, Benjamin J. Brooks, Dr. Hervin U. Roop and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gillingham.

Sanford Manslaughter Conviction Is Affirmed

The Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the conviction of Anna Marie Sanford, found guilty of manslaughter in the death of William G. Jenkins.

Jenkins was stabbed to death, and the defendant was given a sentence of from one to three years. A directed verdict of not guilty was given a co-defendant.

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Those were harsh words Joe McCarthy used in Philadelphia the other day when he pooh-poohed the idea of Cleveland winning the pennant. It may be the tip-off that the Yankee manager is not the calm and serene fellow of former years when he was content to say nothing and take his satisfaction out of the American League's vital statistics.

POVICH

In case you hadn't heard, McCarthy told Philadelphia baseball writers that he wasn't worried by the Cleveland club. He went further and delivered baseball's insult supreme. He said that the Cleveland club would choke up. And he named names.

"They always do," said McCarthy. "I've seen Cleveland clubs get out in front before. And they always choke. And the chief choker is Johnny Allen. I ought to know. Had him on my team for three years."

When he named Allen, that was surprising. The Yankees' manager must have some special knowledge about the temperamental Cleveland right-hander because around the league Allen is known as a ball player who literally teems with fire and spirit. And he won 15 straight games last season. Pitchers who can do that aren't the choke-up kind. In fact, there is evidence that McCarthy is all wrong about Allen.

It may be that McCarthy was simply letting off steam. Ever since he traded Allen to the Indians in exchange for Pitcher Monte Pearson, reminders of the ill effects of that deal have been all too frequent. While Allen has been a consistent star with Cleveland, Pearson has not startled anybody with his pitching for the Yankees. There is plenty of evidence that McCarthy took a sad licking on the deal.

* * * *

But the fact that the usually taciturn manager of the Yanks has come right out and taken a crack at another ball club in the league may be highly significant. McCarthy made his remarks about the Cleveland club at the start of last week-end, after his Yankees had lost two straight to the seventh place Athletics and before they had recouped some prestige by knocking off the Red Sox three in a row.

Never before had McCarthy been the one to fret. He always had supreme confidence in the ability of the Yanks to overcome their slow starts and beat down the opposition starting late in May. But here it was late in May and the Yankees, after winning only three games on a Western trip, had lost two to the A's. If the Yankee's manager wasn't worried, he had reason to be.

There wasn't much doubt that his Yankees had begun to look bad. Red Ruffing was the only pitcher on the club who could win consistently. Atley Donald, the Newark ace of last year, had already been sent back and Beggs, the other pitching star from Newark, had been unable to win. Lou Gehrig wasn't hitting and there wasn't much doubt that they missed Tony Lazzeri.

* * * *

The Yankes may be under way again with their three straight wins over the Red Sox in which they pounded the ball like the old Yankees, but it's pretty evident that McCarthy's team has lost face in this pennant race.

No longer do they inspire the same fear when they take the field. In previous years they could over-awe the opposition with their mighty records, but this season they have been losing ball games regularly. They don't shape up like the old Yankees. With Gehrig in his slump, Joe DiMaggio and Bill Dickey have been forced to carry the load. The others—Rolfe, Crosetti, Powell, Henrich, Knickerbocker and Gordon—are not the type to throw any consternation into other ball clubs.

Despite McCarthy's fistful of aspersions, the Cleveland Club does not look at all ill-fitted to stay up there on top. If any club beats out the Yankees, it could just as well be the Indians. It might easily be the Indians if it were not for the Cleveland Club's road-games complex. If

Bob Barnett, Worsham to Play in Open

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The Chevy Chase golf shop supplied the co-leaders in the National Open qualifying rounds at Indian Spring yesterday as Robert H. Barnett and his 20-year-old assistant, Lewis Worsham, who surprised by tying his "boss," led the field of 19 with twin 146's. The third place from the Middle Atlantic sector was won by Johnny Bass, Clifton Park, after a playoff with George Diffenbaugh.

Barnett and Worsham, set the pace in the morning rounds with par 71, each out in 35 and back in 36. The former took a three stroke lead on the third nine of the day with a par 35 and finished with 40 for the 146 total. Out in 38, Worsham went 4 shots back by dropping a stroke to par on the twenty-eighth hole but finished with 8 consecutive holes in regulation figures to tie Barnett.

Bass and Diffenbaugh, playing together, were both indifferent about making the long trip to Denver June 9 to 11 and after the 36 holes found themselves deadlocked with 150's. Bass won the playoff on the first hole with a par.

Favorites Are Beaten.

Favored players to finish among the top three, including Leo Walper, Chandler Harper and Cliff Spencer, were scattered several strokes behind the place-winners, Spencer with four 38's for a 152 total, Walper a stroke higher, after practicing daily for two weeks in an effort to gain a place, and Harper was 77 in the morning and turned in no card after starting with a seven in the afternoon.

Barnett Consistent.

Barnett played consistent golf over the route. He missed par on the fifth and ninth holes of the out nine, but regained the strokes with birdies on seven and eight. He went 1 under par on the seventeenth hole where he dropped a 12-foot putt for a deuce, but finished with a bogey 5 for the 71. In the afternoon he was again over on the fifth, but deuced the next hole to stay even with par. He encountered a pair of 3-putt greens and two bad second shots on the back nine to go 4 over par, playing the last hole in 5 for the second time.

Worsham birdied four holes on his initial round, but went over on five and six in succession and chipped poorly on twelve and thirteen to finish with a 71. He started

Third Title!

Armstrong Will Seek to Defeat Ambers This Summer.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—Henry Armstrong, the surprising little bomber from the Pacific Coast, aimed for his third world's title fight in 12 months tonight after knocking the welterweight crown from the sleek black head of Barney Ross in the Madison Square Garden Bowl.

"I'm looking up Louis Ambers' address," said the jubilant Armstrong as police rushed him to his dressing room after the fight. "I want to fight and lick him in July and win my third world's title in a year's time."

Last October Armstrong, who had won 38 consecutive fights since January 1, 1937, took the featherweight title from Petey Sarron, of Birmingham. He then invaded the lightweight ranks and tonight jumped into still another division to give Ross by far the worst trimming of his career.

"It was the easiest fight I ever had," said Armstrong. "I found out early in the fight that Barney couldn't punch hard enough to hurt me. From then on I had things my own way. Why I didn't knock him out, I can't say. I can tell you he's plenty smart and a mighty tough customer, though."

Over in Ross' dressing room it was a sad story.

A game but disappointed Ross said definitely he was through with the ring. He regained the title in May, 1935, in the third of three thrilling battles with Jimmy McLarnin.

As early as the seventh round, Ross disclosed, his managers asked him to quit, but he refused. After the twelfth, Art Winch, a co-pilot insisted he give up. Again Ross overruled them.

"I wanted to go down fighting if I had to go," he said—and he did.

Powell Is Suspended 3 Days, Fined $25

New York, May 31 (U.P.).—Jake Powell, New York Yankee outfielder, today was suspended for three days and fined $25 as a result of his fist fight with Manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox yesterday. Powell was notified of the action by American League President Will Harridge. Cronin was neither fined nor suspended.

The Fight by Rounds

ROUND ONE.

They came out fighting. Ross landed a light left to the head. Armstrong rushed in, got over a right to the belly and took a right on the chin. They mauled each other in close quarters. Armstrong landed a solid right to the head and took a right to the head in return. They were setting a furious pace, each starting many blows, although few that landed were telling ones. Armstrong missed a tremendous right to the head, Ross neatly ducking under it.

ROUND TWO.

They sparred cautiously in midring. Armstrong danced in but only barely touched Barney with a left jab to the face. Ross missed a right uppercut and Henry landed a left to the head.

They fought savagely in close quarters in the center of the ring. Ross tagged Armstrong with two rights to the face and the colored boy replied with a right to the body. Armstrong missed two looping rights, one to the head and the other to the body.

Fighting toe to toe they whaled away at each other in Ross' corner. The pace was even faster than that of the first round. Armstrong missed a round-house right to the head and Ross landed a telling right to the head.

It was Ross' round, also by a slight margin.

ROUND THREE.

They traded meaningless body blows in a half clinch in the center of the ring. Armstrong came up and scored a hard right to the body.

Armstrong forced Ross into the ropes with a two-fisted body attack. Armstrong landed two hard lefts to he face, forcing Ross to cover up. Armstrong was now fighting with complete abandon.

He swarmed into Ross scoring repeatedly with lefts and rights to the body. Ross replied with powerless rights to the body. Armarong was the aggressor throughout. It was Armstrong's round.

ROUND FOUR.

Armstrong was first to land. It was a light right to the face. Armstrong again forced the pace and landed another right to the head.

Ross was backing against the ropes. Armstrong landed two lefts to the face. Barney was trying to clinch, but Armstrong slipped away from him. Ross opened up and scored with a light right to the face.

ROUND FIVE.

They pummeled each other in a neutral corner. Armstrong landed a right to the head and then with a two-fisted body attack forced Ross into the ropes in Armstrong's corner.

Armstrong was forcing the fight and Barney was backing away. Armstrong reached from the floor and just missed Barney's chin. Ross opened up and scored rapid rights to the head. The crowd was yelling: "In the belly, Barney!" Armstrong forced Ross to the ropes and landed several light lefts to the face.

Armstrong was throwing punches from all directions. Barney was inclined to clinch as Armstrong continued to bore. Armstrong landed two lefts to the face. It was Armstrong's round.

ROUND SIX.

Armstrong again forced the pace. He backed Barney into the ropes of the welter king's own corner. Armstrong forced Ross to clinch.

He peppered away at Barney's nose and Ross again fell into a clinch. Armstrong, in a half clinch, scored a right uppercut to the jaw. Armstrong was low with a right. Ross landed two light rights to the head.

Armstrong crouched and let fly with both fists. Ross seemed worried. Armstrong jolted Barney with a long right to the face. Fighting against the ropes Henry swarmed all over Barney. He was beating him at will as Barney tried to clinch.

Ross was bleeding from the nose. It was Armstrong's round.

ROUND SEVEN.

Managers Plan and Winch complained to Referee Donovan that Armstrong had been guilty of elbowing. Ross had a blackened right eye as the round started.

Armstrong again carried the fight to Ross but was unable to break through Barney's guard. Both boys landed at will in a neutral corner, but no serious damage was done.

Armstrong landed a hard right to the head. Barney appeared tired. He backed away, but the colored boy kept on top of his opponent.

Barney landed several light lefts to face. Armstrong landed at will in a clinch and the referee separated the boys.

Barney turned to one side and tried to get away from Armstrong's vicious attack. Armstrong bobbed under Barney's futile effort to box with him.

Armstrong had the better of the fighting, but the round was awarded to Ross because of a low blow.

ROUND EIGHT.

Armstrong landed three rights to the face without a return. Armstrong missed with another right to the head.

Ross, covering up, ducked into Armstrong's corner. Henry blasted him out of it with a two-fisted body attack. Ross' right eye was now badly puffed.

Armstrong missed a wild right to the head, but landed a series of lefts and rights to the face.

Ross was fighting like a man who knew he was being beaten. Armstrong, ever the aggressor, landed lefts and rights to the body. Armstrong landed a devastating left to the face which stunned Barney momentarily.

ROUND NINE.

Armstrong rushed out and forced Ross into a neutral corner with a stiff body attack. Armstrong landed three lefts to the face.

Ross started several blows which never found their marks. Armstrong peppered Barney with left jabs to the face. Henry, with Ross backing against the ropes, was left-jabbing continually.

Armstrong continued to whale away, forcing Ross to cover and back-pedal. Armstrong landed three rights to the head.

Armstrong swarmed all over Barney, scoring lefts and rights to the head. Barney appeared to stagger and was anxious to clinch.

ROUND TEN.

Armstrong landed repeatedly with rights and lefts to the body. Barney walked away from Henry but the colored boy was quick to resume his relentless attack.

Each missed long rights to the head. Barney went into a clinch. Armstrong tore away savagely and then came in to land two lefts to the face.

Ross was a pitiful-looking fighter as the Negro pounded him at will. Barney was taking a severe beating now. Armstrong whaled away at the tired champion and had him in bad way. Armstrong landed a left to the head. Barney seemed ready to collapse, but unleased a momentary flurry of lefts and rights to the body.

Armstrong socked Barney with a stiff left at the bell. It was Armstrong's round. Ross appeared tired and almost helpless as his handlers prepared him for the next round.

ROUND ELEVEN.

Armstrong, ever the aggressor, did not let Barney get out of his corner. Armstrong slammed a hard right to the chin which made Barney's upper lip swell.

Armstrong chased Barney all over the ring landing with both fists at will. Barney was in a daze. Armstrong landed lefts and rights to the body.

Barney was helpless in his own corner. Armstrong landed a sequence of lefts and rights to the body. Barney couldn't seem to ward off his opponent.

Referee Donovan went over and held a consultation with Ross' managers. He told the United Press: "I won't let it go much longer."

ROUND TWELVE.

Armstrong opened with a hard right to the face. Armstrong landed lefts and rights to the body. The busy little colored man forced Ross into a neutral corner and jolted him with a right to the head.

It seemed for a moment as though Barney was going down. Armstrong continued to whale away with those lefts and rights to the body and face. Ross was completely spent. Armstrong belted Ross squarely in the face with hard rights and lefts.

Ross gamely replied with a left to the body. Armstrong swarmed all over Ross in a neutral corner and Barney was helpless. Again home spectators were yelling "stop it." Armstrong peppered Ross with a fist to the face.

Barney was in a daze. Armstrong's round. Donovan again went over to consult Ross' handlers.

ROUND THIRTEEN.

Ross was slow in leaving his corner. Armstrong raced out to him and pegged away with rights and lefts at will. Armstrong never let up. He chased Ross all around the ring. Armstrong continued to land at will and it appeared that the referee would stop the contest.

Armstrong jolted Barney with a right to the head. Ross was back pedaling continually. Armstrong slammed over two lefts to the head. Barney was helpless and couldn't fight back. Armstrong pounded away at Barney as the crowd yelled: "Stop it!" Armstrong jabbed Ross repeatedly and Barney covered up. Barney could not defend himself.

Armstrong swarmed all over him. Ross seemed to be fighting purely from instinct. He was definitely dazed. It was Armstrong's round.

Donovan went over to Ross' corner but heeding an admonition from Gen. John Phelan, chairman of the State athletic commission, did not talk to Plan or Winch.

ROUND FOURTEEN.

Again Ross came out slowly and the fighting started near his own corner. Armstrong landed a right to the face which drew fresh blood from Barney's nose. They were sliding along the ropes. Armstrong scoring continually.

Barney landed an occasional puny body blow. The pace had slowed considerably but Armstrong continued to bore in.

Armstrong tagged Ross with several lefts to the body on the ropes. Henry landed hard left to the mouth.

Armstrong staggered Ross with a right to the head. Barney backed into the ropes. Ross was a sorry mess.

Henry continued to whale away at will. Barney reached out but although he landed two light rights they packed no authority. It was Armstrong's round.

ROUND FIFTEEN.

Barney's right eye was completely closed and was blackening perceptibly. They tapped gloves in mid-ring. Armstrong bore into Ross, forcing him back into his own corner. Ross seemed content merely to cover up and shield himself from the rain of blows.

They mauled each other meaninglessly in a half-clinch in Ross' corner. Armstrong jolted Ross with a right to the head.

Ross opened a futile flurry but Armstrong was quick to get on top of his man. Armstrong, busy as ever, forced Ross back into a neutral corner.

Joe's King!

All's Quiet on U. St. as Armstrong Wins Welter Crown.

By Jack Munhall.

Joe Louis is still king on U street!

Despite the sensational victory that Hurricane Henry Armstrong registered over favored Barney Ross, there was little excitement in Washington's Harlem last night.

U street, Broadway of the city's large colored population, was strangely quiet as the West Coast featherweight dealt the champ a merciless beating and lifted the welterweight crown.

There was none of the wild celebrating that broke out a year ago as Louis knocked out Jimmy Braddock to win the heavyweight title. There were no automobiles careening crazily up the street, their horns blowing like mad, their occupants screaming with joy. There were no false alarms turned in to bring fire apparatus roaring to the scene, adding to the general confusion. There were no milling crowds packing the sidewalks and even the streets to snarl traffic for hours as they traded phantom punches, shadow boxed and yelled with voices high-pitched with emotion, "ain't nobody goin' to beat old Joe Louis."

No, U street seemed to accept the result with indifference, either because of lack of interest or lack of surprise at the result. While the fight was being broadcast, small groups loitered outside hamburger joints, liquor stores and restaurants and tried to catch the announcer's words over the continual clang of street cars and screeching of quickly-stopped automobiles.

Once when the announcer said, "Armstrong's the greatest fighting machine I've ever seen," they perked their heads and nodded one to the other.

And when the fight was over and the decision was announced, "The winner and new welterweight champion — Henry Armstrong," many had already left, sauntering slowly up the street, for they knew there could be but one result.

Some remained and were joined by others who poured out of stores, apartment houses and there homes. But still there was little noise. Only discussion of the fight was carried on by small knots who gathered at the corner of Fourteenth and U.

The only disorderliness had nothing to do with Armstrong or Ross. Two stout men dragging a shabbily-dressed fellow about middle-age and obviously intoxicated approached an officer and with much gesticulating informed him that the prisoner had pounded on their door and threw a rock at them. A crowd soon gathered around the box as the officer summoned the wagon, but as quickly dispersed when there was no more to see.

Things were not so good, however, for Jack Smith, the newsboy with the leather lungs, who is known to all in that vicinity. For with a wry face Jack was moaning that someone had "swiped a hundred of my papers."

Roosevelt High School's baseball team rode into sole possession of second place honors in the Inter-High standings behind the fast-ball flinging of Jack Redinger, a tall, slim righthander, who won his third straight series victory by forcing Western's Red Raiders to bow, 7-5, at Roosevelt Stadium yesterday.

The game was tied 3-all until the first half of the eighth inning when Umpire George Watt thumbed both Toby Bright and Second Baseman Hodge from the game after a mix-up on a play at second base. This seemed to disturb the Western lads quite a bit, and when Warren Reed was sent to the mound to replace Bright, Roosevelt jumped on him for four big runs, enough to win going away.

George Oertel, fleet-footed centerfielder, with three hits in four trips to the plate, and Tom O'Hanlon, second sacker, with two hits in five attempts, were the big guns in the loser's attack. Harry Gray was the only Rider player able to connect safely twice. John Thrift and Irving Needle came up with spectacular catches in the fielding department.

Anacostia High School, which has lost five consecutive games in the public school race, reversed the situation yesterday and, behind the mound work of Arthur Faircloth, triumphed over the National Training School nine, 8 to 2, at Eastern Stadium. Faircloth also homered to share hitting honors with Robert Gordon, who belted out four hits in four attempts for a perfect day at bat.

Gonzaga Golfers Annex Title

The first annual Metropolitan Scholastic Golf League was concluded yesterday as Gonzaga won its eleventh consecutive match at Indian Spring, a 5-4 victory over Montgomery Blair, and Western and Roosevelt scored shutout victories over Bethesda and Devitt, respectively.

Buddy Sharkey won his forty-seventh match in 49 starts as he finished his scholastic golf career, although his team was given a scare by the Montgomery Blair representatives.

Western's defeat of Bethesda yesterday enabled it to tie for second place, while three others were deadlocked for fourth.

Western, 5; Bethesda, 0.

Brown defeated Lord, 7 and 6; Maloney defeated Bolton, 2 and 1. Best ball, Western, 6 and 5.

Vass defeated Fuller, 8 and 6; Silverthorne defeated DiBlasi, 5 and 4. Best ball, Western, 6 and 4.

Gonzaga, 5; Blair, 4.

Sharkey (G) defeated Thompson, 8 and 7; Buscher (B) defeated Quinn, 6 and 5. Best ball, Gonzaga, 4 and 3.

Fitzgerald (G) defeated Donnelly, 1 up, 19 holes; Bodnar (G) defeated Tabbutt, 3 and 2. Best ball, Gonzaga, 2 and 1.

Mason (B) defeated Beuchert, 1 up; Sills (B) defeated Saringer, 2 and 1. Best ball, Blair, 3 and 1.

Colored Boy Swarms All Over Champ

Fight

have taken advantage of such tactics in other years, was powerless to do anything about it.

Armstrong lost his best round, incidentally, when penalized for a low blow in the seventh. This round marked the battle's turning point and the 40,000 fans present sensed the champion's impending downfall as he struggled futilely to stave off the maze of arms and elbows and leather the Negro flung at him. It was a challenge he wasn't able to meet, physically.

Henry clubbed his opponent with everything he had. He bullied him around the ring, backing him into corners and lashing out with powerful, sweeping lefts and rights to the head. Ross' ring generalship saved him from a knockout and serious damage, but couldn't keep the Negro from adding to his mounting margin.

Staved Off Knockout.

Armstrong's blows bounced off the top of his head, splattered on his blood-streaked neck, and cracked sharply against his ribs. Ross turned half-way round, tried to hide his chin behind his shoulder. He carried his right hand high, glove open—not even trying to throw a punch. He was striving to stave off a threatening kayo punch. He did, too.

Several times, particularly early in the bout, Ross connected with both hands to the Negro's bobbing, crinkly head, but the blows didn't fease the challenger. Had any of his former power remained in his limp, tired arms, Ross might have slowed up the enemy at least emporarily. But Armstrong only shook them off with a burlesque twitch of the shoulders, lowered his head and bored into the falling champion.

Ross finished gamely and well, trying to fight back into the picture with brief flurries in the fourteenth and fifteenth rounds, but he wasn't punching, merely pawing at the Negro's cast-iron physique. It was a pitiful finish for the man who once stood up under the withering fire of Jimmy McLarnin and Tony Canzoneri, two of the ring's mightiest champions, and came on to beat them for the title.

Ross Looked Bad.

Ross not only couldn't punch tonight, but couldn't box. At intervals he resembled a rank amateur more than a world champion. His legs, the spring gone, refused to co-operate with his bewildered brain and couldn't move him out of the danger zone when Armstrong moved in, throwing punishing leather grenades. He didn't move around, much less dance around, because he couldn't. He had to stand in his tracks—slowly retreating all the while, and take it. But he took it like a champion.

Armstrong met him more than halfway across the ring each succeeding round, prancing out of his corner with that peculiar shuffling gait. He inched in close to the pink and perspiring champion and started throwing punches. That was his plan of battle—the same plan he followed in previous bouts, and he stuck to it. Simple but effective it was, and there was nothing Ross could do about it.

Barney tried to stand him off with a long left—tried to measure him for a right hand, but couldn't find him. Armstrong's head bobbed under the extended paw, slid away to the left, then to the right, then described a wide arc as Ross felt feebly for him. Barney missed not once or twice, but dozens of times with both hands, and every miss was converted into a hit for the eventual winner, who stepped in quickly, belting with both hands.

Armstrong missed, too, several times as Ross outmaneuvered him in a corner, but the law of averages was heavily on his side as he punched and punched and punched and punched.

Won by Wide Margin.

On the official score-sheets, Referee Arthur Donovan gave Ross two rounds—one, the seventh, on a foul—Armstrong 12, and called one even. Judge Billy Kavanaugh gave the fallen welter ruler 4, Armstrong 10, and called 1 even. Judge George Lecron called 2 for Ross, again 1 by virtue of Armstrong's foul in the seventh; 11 for Armstrong and 2 even.

In his dressing room immediately after the fight Armstrong told a host of curious, press representatives and personal friends, it was one of the easiest fights of his career. He now looks forward to a lightweight title bout with Champion Lew Ambers, but expects him to be more troublesome than Ross.

The thumb and index finger of the new champion's left hand were badly hurt, possibly broken, in the seventh. They swelled rapidly when the gauze and tape were removed from his hand.

For Ross the defeat marked the end of the resin trail. He told reporters in his dressing room he was through. Though marked, swollen and sore, he was not seriously hurt. He was only sorry he didn't make a better fight of it.

The opening prelim, four rounds, ended in a draw when Jimmy Liddell, Los Angeles, 130¼, rallied after a slow start against Frankie Aiello, East Side New Yorker, 128¾.

Sammy Julian, Brooklyn, 130¼, gained the decision over Johnny Rinaldi, Bronx, 138, in another four-rounder punctuated by the novelty of both boys falling to the canvas, simultaneously, from the force of misdirected swings.

Phil Siriani, Bronx, 135½, punched out a six-round victory over Young Chappie, Albany, N. Y., 134¾.

Yankees Win, 12-5; Gehrig Plays in 2,000th

Henrich, Dickey, Rolfe Homer; Foxx Cleans Bases With Clout.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—Iron Hoss Lou Gehrig galloped past the 2,000 consecutive game mark in the greatest endurance record in sports today and the Yankees celebrated with a lop-sided 12 to 5 victory over Boston's staggering Red Sox.

Every regular in the Yankee line-up hit at least once in the 16-hit attack the world champions fired at three Sox hurlers. But the player who took the smallest active part in the celebration was Lou himself.

Tommy Henrich hit his sixth homer; Bill Dickey contributed his fifth; Red Rolfe lined his second into the right field stands, and Billy Knickerbocker belted out a triple, double and two singles in the Yankee attack.

Meantime, all Lou was able to do was connect for a fluke single that bounced past second base in the eighth inning. Otherwise, except for a walk in the first inning, he didn't get close to first base except when the Yanks were afield.

Lou accepted today's 2,000th milestone in his record as a takeoff point to what he hopes will be an amazing run of 2,500 straight games played without a break. He began the string as a husky young fellow with a pair of "piano legs" back in 1925, and now at 34, he doesn't see any signs of the run being broken. Long since, he has passed the previous consecutive-game mark of 1,307 set by Deacon Scott before Iron Hoss Lou appeared on the scene.

Although he wasn't the big man with the war club today, he played a flawless game around first base, making the final three putouts in the ninth to top off a classy relief pitching effort by Johnny Murphy Johnny gave up but one hit and two walks in 4 2-3 innings of work after Young Joe Beggs was belted out by Jimmy Foxx's homer with the bases loaded in the fifth.

The Nats Are Home for 12 Days and Everybody, Including Bonura, Is Happy

By Shirley Povich.

Home, no more to roam, for 12 days. That's the pleasant fact the Nats can contemplate as they dig in at Griffith Stadium today to face the invasion of the four Western clubs.

In Boston the Nats have been a complete washout. In New York they have done none too well. In Cleveland and Chicago they have been badly licked. And in Philadelphia and St. Louis they could only break even. But at Griffith Stadium the Nats have enjoyed themselves hugely since the season started.

At home they have won 16 out of 21 games—have played .760 ball. Almost magical have been the effects of the friendly confines of Griffith Stadium on their play. Here batting slumps have vanished and the Washington pitching has squared itself. Even Zeke Bonura hits moderately well in Griffith Stadium.

That is the finest compliment that Mr. Griffith's ball yard can be paid, perhaps, because Bonura has not been hitting in the other parks of the league. His current batting average of .229 is one of the chief concerns of Manager Bucky Harris.

The early season jubilation in Washington over the Bonura-Joe Kuhel deal has begun to subside. The run-producing hits that were supposed to rocket from the big fellow's bat haven't been doing that. The Nats were supposed to be sacrificing defensive skill in a quest for hitting power when they traded Kuhel for Bonura, and at this writing they have simply sacrificed defensive skill.

Today it's the Chicago White Sox who open the invasion by the Western clubs, each of whom moves into Griffith Stadium for a three-day series. With the Sox will be Joe Kuhel, now fully recovered from his wrenched foot.

Manager Bucky Harris with his pitching staff considerably jumbled, will start Jimmy DeShong against the White Sox. Johnny Whitehead is expected to take the mound for the Sox, who took two straight from the Nats at Chicago.

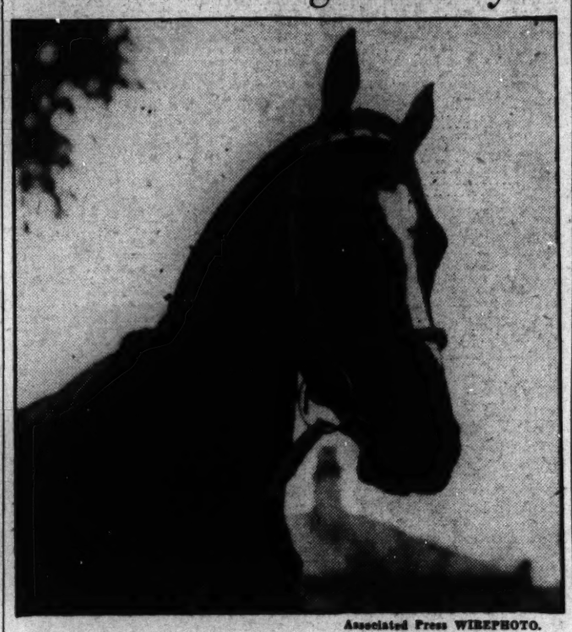
Bonura took a special half-hour batting practice at Griffith Stadium yesterday in an effort to shake his batting slump. He hit several hefty drives into the bleachers.

Bucky Harris appears definitely committed to his reversible outfield which now finds Taft Wright supplanting Al Simmons against right-handed pitching. When left-handers face the Nats, Simmons and Case will replace Almada and Wright in the line-up.

Harris is on the point of abandoning his season-long plan of alternating Buddy Myer and Ossie Bluege at second base against different types of pitching. Myer, who is batting .333, and apparently in for a large season at bat, was never annoyed by southpaw pitching in his good years.

The trading deadline is only 15 days distant. Any big deals must be swung before June 15. After that, the only kind of trades permissible are those involving waivers. Clark Griffith declares there is not a single deal brewing in which the Nats might figure.

Favorite in English Derby



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

H. E. Morriss' Pasch is a heavy favorite, at odds of 11 to 4, to win the historic Epsom Derby of a mile and a half at Epsom Downs in England today. Rain drenched the course last night but Pasch remained the strong choice to lead the field of 22 other 3-year-olds home.

Pasch Choice To Win Derby

H. E. Morriss Entry Is 11-4 Favorite.

By the Associated Press.

Epsom, Eng., May 31.—The carnival of England, Epsom's historic Derby, will be run and won tomorrow by H. E. Morriss' Pasch—if the experts are right.

With colossal confidence and a fine disregard for history, they have decided Pasch is a cinch. The stewards, they insist, merely are running the race because the King and some 400,000 of his subjects can't break the habit of going to it.

Rain drenched the downs tonight and lengthened the odds on Pasch to 11 to 4 in the final callover but he remained the strong choice to show the way to 22 other 3-year-olds over the mile and a half. By tomorrow the odds may be even shorter.

Other leaders listed in the callover, just in case, were J. V. Rank's Scottish Union, 15-2; Sir Humphrey de Trafford's Portmarnock, 10-1, and Lord Astor's Pound Foolish, Sir Abe Bailey's Golden Sovereign, and the Aga Kahn's Mirza II, each 100-6. His Majesty's entry, License, was considered no better than 100 to 1.

The two American-owned horses, William Woodward's Valerian III and J. E. Widener's Unbreakable, also were outsiders at 45 to 1 and 50 to 1, respectively.

England's practically forgotten the war scare in excitement over the Derby. Everybody's picked a winner—everbody from the astrologers to stable boys. Derby balls have been going on for days. Newspaper sales have jumped as if war had been declared.

Abrams Leaves for Training; Thunderbird Challenges Jim

Winner of Mat Event Thursday May Meet Indian Rassler.

Thunderbird, whose only defeat in nine months here was at the hands of Joe Savoldi, is meeting Rudy Kay, a newcomer from Illinois, in one of the supporting bouts closed yesterday by Promoter Joe Turner.

The big Redskin spent the afternoon working out at Turner's Arena, and will train there again today.

Thunderbird has faced London and Bruns before. He met Londos in Philadelphia three months ago, losing a decision that almost caused a ringside riot. He grappled to a draw with Bruns a few months back in New York.

Having encountered both men, the Chief yesterday went on record as predicting Bruns would defeat Londos. He says the young Chicagoan is one of the most promising prospects in the game today.

Bruns has informed Promoter Turner that he will immediately put in a claim to titular honors should he pin Londos. The Gorgeous Greek has lost only one match since acquiring the world's crown and losing it to Danno O'Mahoney. That defeat at the hands of O'Mahoney.

Promoter Turner completed his card yesterday. Fred Grobmier, arch foe of Londos back in the halcyon days, has been matched with Boris Demitroff, the Russian, in a semi-windup.

Orville Brown, of Kansas will meet Frenchy LaRue, and Ivan Vacturoff will take on Jake Patterson.

Work Under Lew Tendler May Help Georgie Against Ted.

Georgie Abrams, 19-year-old Washington middleweight, who meets Teddy Yarosz, former world champion, next Monday night at Griffith Stadium in a ten-round feature match, shoves off this morning for Philadelphia. He leaves for a two-day training season with Lew Tendler, one-time lightweight great.

Sid Fishel, his manager, is accompanying young Abrams to the Quaker City, where Tendler will teach him a trick or two to use against Yarosz.

Fishel, who also trains the Jewish scrapper, thought the Woolworth Building fell on him yesterday when he sampled one of Georgie's punches.

After Buddy Thomas and Kid Howie, Abrams' sparmates, were buffeted around, Fishel volunteered to step a few rounds with his protege.

"I'm sorry, Syd, I didn't mean to hit you so hard," Abrams told his manager.

"Just hit Teddy Yarosz like that next Monday night—and I'll let you knock me out anytime!" Fishel replied.

Later they went over to Georgie's home and had dinner together.

Interest in the fight increased yesterday with the announcement that Yarosz would open his training campaign tomorrow afternoon at Turner's Arena. He will arrive from New York with his trainer, Ray Arcel, and will be on display each afternoon. The public is invited.

Yarosz' trainer, speaking with Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday, said that Teddy was in good condition, ready to win back the title he lost to Babe Risko in 1933.

The former champion has been working at Stillman's gym. He will do road work in the morning around East Potomac.

Cup Tournament Will Draw 146 Entries at Washington

Mrs. Betty Meckley Will Defend Title; Helen Dettweiler Not Entered.

The Herald Cup Tournament at the Washington Golf and Country Club tomorrow, fourth event on the District women's golf card, will attract 146 entries, including the defending champion, Mrs. Betty Meckley.

An innovation to the women's tournaments, play in twosomes, will be tried to speed up the play. They will leave the tee three minutes apart, instead of the usual threesomes, five minutes apart. The ball nearest the cup will be putted first, instead of marking it, the same system that is used in professional tournaments now.

Helen Dettweiler, newly crowned Maryland State women's champion for the second consecutive year, and winner of the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial event, first on the calendar, will not play, but otherwise the field includes the entire championship first team from Indian Spring; Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra Platt, Chevy Chase; Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor; Mrs. T. J. Johnson, Army and Navy, and Mrs. Myron Davy, Congressional.

Doubles.

Volkert and Elliott forfeited to Dorsavage and Goldsmith.

Ransone and Belt defeated O'Hanlon and Behrendt, 6—3, 6—3.

Wright and Prentis forfeited to Zender and Smith.

Mrs. Miller Loses To Mrs. Robinson

In the Star's City of Washington Tennis Tournament yesterday Margaret Robinson defeated Winnie Suttle, 6—2, 6—2, in the semifinals of the women's event. A quarter-final round saw David Johnson win over Frank Shore, 7—5, 4—6, 6—2, and Allie Ritzenberg stop Ray Stocklinski, 6—2, 6—1, in the men's division.

Mrs. Robinson and Dorette Miller will play Ann Ellis and Margo Lee for the doubles championship this morning at 10:30 at the Army and Navy Country Club. The singles championship is scheduled for tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, on the same courts, between Mrs. Robinson and Sara Moore.

Indian Spring Women Teams Take First Crown on Links

Indian Spring's women's golf team clinched the first team championship yesterday by handing the defending champion Chevy Chase team its fourth straight setback, 6 to 3, at Chevy Chase, for a 24-point total to the hosts' 12 over the four week series of dual matches.

At Army and Navy the hosts pulled the biggest surprise of the second team play by handing Congressional its first defeat, by a convincing 6½ to 2½ margin. Columbia, winning 7 to 2 over Manor, took first place by one-half point, with 38½ to Army and Navy and Congressional's 38 each. Washington won 5½ to 3½ over Chevy Chase and Beaver Dam 7 to 2 over Woodmont in other matches.

Congressional was virtually assured of having a champion in one division however as its third team blanked Columbia, 9 to 0, at Kenwood and boosted its point total to 37. Manor scored a 6 to 3 win over Chevy Chase and Indian Spring won over Army and Navy by the same margin on other matches. Kenwood drew a bye.

Mrs. Bishop Hill and Mrs. Landra B. Platt remained undefeated members of the Chevy Chase team through the four matches as they halved Mrs. Betty Meckley and Marion Brown. Mrs. Charlotte Stern and Mrs. Walter Stokes won 2 points and Mrs. K. S. Giles and Mrs. C. P. Medley 3 as they clinched the trophy.

Colonial Gridmen Won't Go to Camp

George Washington University's football team, for the first time in nine years will not go to Camp Letts this fall for preliminary training, Coach Bill Reinhart announced yesterday.

Instead the squad will be summoned a week earlier, about September 13, and will be conditioned probably in Ballston, Va., where Johnny Baker, a G. W. alumnus and former football player, coaches his Washington-Lee High teams.

Reinhart said he had various reasons for discontinuing camp training, chief of which was the "relapse" the players suffered on coming into the city after a month's absence from the bright lights.

Hoya-Terp Game Set for Thursday

The Georgetown-Maryland baseball game, last of the season for both nines, has been moved up from Saturday to Thursday, it was announced last night.

When the teams line up at 3 o'clock on the Hoya Medical School field at Thirty-ninth and Reservoir road, a new face will be seen at third base for the Terps. Since Waverley Wheeler has signed with Knoxville, a Pirate farm, Perish Mondorff will start at the hot corner.

Hurdy Gurdy Takes Register Purse at Charles Town, Pays $9.80

Root Boots Mare Home In First Try

Finishes Length Ahead of Best Policy in Her 1938 Debut.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 31.—P. C. Randolph's Hurdy Gurdy, popular daughter of Strolling Player, made her first start of 1938 a winning one by taking down the Register Purse, outstanding event on today's seven-race program here in the mountains. The 6-year-old mare saved ground throughout to finish a length in advance of Best Policy and four additional lengths ahead of Bungalow. Five others "also ran" in the seven-furlong test.

A $9.80 shot in the betting, Hurdy Gurdy was Jockey Bobby Root's second winner of the day and she stepped the route in 1:29 2-5 over a fast track.

Root shared riding honors with Lou Machado, who for the second time at this meeting, piloted both ends of the daily double. Machado's winners were Lady Dunlin and Forget Not, the combination paying $46.

Best Policy Challenges.

Miss Epe and Caidon battled for the pace setting honors as the feature race began with Hurdy Gurdy close up. At the far turn, Root drove Hurdy Gurdy through on the rail and she went to the front gradually. Best Policy then came along to challenge, but Hurdy Gurdy had something left and held the Trojan mare safe in the final test.

Tody West proved the right favorite in the first race. Performing in the colors of Sam Hall and ridden by Jockey C. Mills, the ancient Westwick mare scored by five lengths after being in front from flag-fall to finish. Pack Away was second, ahead of Dun Lucky. The winner paid $4.40.

Unable to win in the mud, Lady Dunlin found the change in track conditions to her liking and scampered away with the second race, winning by a length over Lady Buck. Justa Canter was third in the field of eight. Lou Machado did little more than guide the daughter of Dunlin which paid $8.80.

Machado Wins Again.

Machado came right back in the third race to win with C. Idelberger's Forgot Not. Many of the bettors forgot to wager on the 10-year-old and he paid a $16.20 mutuel. Prince Khayyam was a surprise second with Gee Sharp third. Forget Not went to the front early and it was all over but the shouting. Look Forward was badly blocked in the running.

He birdied 7 on 9 and 10, the fourth time he went over on two consecutive holes, he regained his par touch and finished by hitting the final eight greens in regulation figures. He was the only player of the day to reach the sixteenth green in two shots, and one of the few to hit the ninth from the tee.

Bass had the lowest nine of the day, a 34, on the outgoing trip, but came back in 41, while Diffenbaugh slipped into third place with a 74 from a pair of 37s. The Kenwood mentor had three strokes on Bass playing the thirty-second hole, but picked up the shots in the next four holes with two birdies and two pars. After Bass missed a 4-footer on the thirty-sixth green for 149, Diffenbaugh missed one-half the distance and then slipped past the cup on the play-off hole and pulled his putt to lose.

Shorey, next with 151, played each nine in 4 over par, missing a 6-foot birdie putt on the final hole after his long second lipped the cup for an eagle deuce.

Frank Cunningham and Al Houghton, who qualified last year, were well down the list. Cunningham, after a 75, soared to 79 in the afternoon, while Houghton started with a 41 and finished with 158.

Playing with Walper was Freddie McLeod, veteran Columbia mentor, who won the Open exactly 30 years ago. He finished 78-84—162.

BARGAIN BOY	(Gaither)	*116	4	8	8	7½	8	8	107.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TODY WEST, $4.40, $2.80, $2.40; PACK AWAY, $3.20, $2.60; DUN LUCKY, $3.80.

TODY WEST, first away, saved ground while opening a lead and drew out to win easily. PACK AWAY worked his way up on outside and closed gamely. DUN LUCKY had speed in spots and appears to be ready. TOPSIE H. closed with a rush. MABEL BEYOND weakened in closing stages. JIMMY D. raced on inside throughout.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:10½. Winner, Mrs. H. E. Jenkins' ch. m. (6), by Dunlin—Philosophy. Trained by P. C. Randolph. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:03.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

MY GRAND	(Mills)	111	8	8	8	8	8	8	52.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY DUNLIN, $8.80, $3.80, $3.00; LADY BUCK, $2.80, $2.40; JUSTA CANTER, $3.80.

LADY DUNLIN, under slight restraint while racing on outside, came around LADY BUCK and disposed of latter without effort in final stages. LADY BUCK shook off GOLD STREAK to open lead and continued gamely under drive, but was no match for winner. JUSTA CANTER moved up menacingly in early stretch, but weakened. GOLD STREAK was rushed throughout and tired. THUNDERLEE was started outside gates.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:39. Winner, C. Idelberger's b. g. (10), by In Memoriam—Lucille Morois. Trained by J. Ryan. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:02 4-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FORGET NOT, $16.20, $7.60, $3.20; PRINCE KHAYYAM, $10.00, $5.20; GEE SHARP, $2.20.

FORGET NOT disposed of GEE SHARP to take command and held away thereafter under strong handling. PRINCE KHAYYAM, forward factor from start, closed with good energy. GEE SHARP, first away, weakened slightly after being displaced. LOOK FORWARD was pulled up sharply when in close quarters at far turn and can do better. The others were not prominent.

Daily Double, Lady Dunlin and Forget Not, Paid $46.00.

FOURTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:07. Winner, Mrs. E. L. Bull's b. f. (3), by Dunlin—Black Wand. Trained by C. Pellner. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:18 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TULEYRIES LIN, $8.80, $4.20, $2.60; EBLIS, $4.00, $2.40; TRIXIE LASS, $2.40.

TULEYRIES LIN, closest to early pace of DOREEN, took command leaving backstretch, saved ground and, under good handling, held EBLIS safe in closing test. The latter, rushed up on outside, came over at first turn to gain forward position, came to outside of TULEYRIES LIN and hung while under pressure. TRIXIE LASS was almost knocked down by HARD CHASE at first turn and failed to rally thereafter. DOREEN stopped badly.

FIFTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:34½. Off 4:35½. Winner, P. C. Randolph's ch. m. (6), by Strolling Player—Miss Belle. Trained by O. F. Kent. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:29 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURDY GURDY, $9.80, $6.00, $4.80; BEST POLICY, $7.20, $4.80; BUNGALOW, $3.80.

HURDY GURDY, within striking distance of the leaders from start, came through on inside to take command and held BEST POLICY safe in closing drive. BEST POLICY came between horses to improve position and gained gradually through stretch. BUNGALOW, allowed to drop back in early stages, closed some ground. MISS EPE was used up running with CAIDON. The latter tired badly.

SIXTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:03. Off 5:03½. Winner, Mrs. R. K. Yingling's ch. g. (8), by Trojan—Airy Jane. Trained by P. Yingling. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:20.

SOUPCON	(Mills)	112	7	7	8	8	8	8	3.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDLEY, $7.60, $3.20, $2.80; TULEYRIES LAD, $3.80, $3.40; CAUTIOUS BO, $5.20.

HANDLEY, sent to front at once, shook off keen contention from CAUTIOUS BO, drew clear and held TULEYRIES LAD safe in closing stages. TULEYRIES LAD, sent to outside, came around horses to better position, cut off CAUTIOUS BO and hung in final drive. CAUTIOUS BO raced on even terms with HANDLEY to far turn and had to be taken up when TULEYRIES LAD bore over. GLOWING COAL had no excuses. RADIAL was allowed to drop back going to first turn and failed to rally.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:32½. Off 5:33. Winner, S. G. Bailey's br. g. (6), by Boo—Miss Woodbrook. Trained by J. G. Davis. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:51 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FAMOUS CLAYTON, $15.40, $6.40, $3.80; LIGHT ACTION, $4.80, $3.20; BABY WITT, $3.60.

FAMOUS CLAYTON, first away, came around MAD DASH and BABY WITT to take command and, under strong handling, held away to end. LIGHT ACTION saved ground, came through on rail entering stretch, but hung in closing test. BABY WITT was forward factor throughout. MAD DASH weakened after setting pace. JUSTA FILORIM had early speed. HIGH EXPLOSION was poorly handled, losing ground throughout.

Pepco's April Net Declines From Year Ago

Profit of $342,850 for the Month Is Drop of $62,083.

Operating revenues of the Potomac Electric Power Co. in April amounted to $1,227,169.89, an increase of$31,221.38, according to the monthly report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission.

Operating expenses called for $786,475.66, which was $71,215.17 more than a year ago, and leaving net operating revenues of $440,694.32, a decrease of $39,993.79 in comparison with the same month last year.

After all deductions from gross earnings to meet interest payments, the company reported a net income for April of $342,850.09, a decrease of $62,083.54.

The company also presented the financial statement for the first four months of this year, showing operating revenues of $5,056,373.34, a gain of $114,837.47. Operating expenses amounted to $3,149,203.19, showing an increase of $284,241.68.

Net income from operations totaled $1,907,171.15, a decrease of $169,404.21. Gross earnings reached the sum of $1,908,280.66. Income deductions for interest on bonds, etc., required $385,680.96, which was $41,000 more than last year.

These deductions left a total net income for the four months of $1,522,599.70, a decline of $241,076.76 from last year, or 13 per cent, the report showed.

Washington Gas Light.

The report of the Washington Gas Light Co. for April filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $715,480, compared with $717,574 for April last year, a decrease of $2,094 as a result of the warmer weather during April this year. Operating expenses increased $23,974 from $502,664 in April, 1937, to $526,638 in April this year, resulting in a net operating revenue of $186,842 in April, 1938, compared with $214,910 for the same month last year.

Nonoperating revenues were $11,597, an increase of $7,246. The net result of the month's operations was a net income of $118,824, which is $18,153 less than last year. For the first four months of the current year the net income was $660,870, compared with $548,968 for the same period last year.

The company also reports gas sales of 1,025,872 mcf, or 4,451 mcf less than the cooler April, 1937. As of April 30, 1938, there were 149,305 meters in service, or 4,035 more than at the same date last year.

D. C. Building and Loan League.

The membership of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League was increased from 20 to 22 associations as a result of the election yesterday of two new members. The Prudential Building Association with resources of over $2,250,000 and the First Federal Savings and Loan Association were the two groups admitted. Prudential, established in 1929 is headed by Luther C. Steward with E. J. Carlson as secretary while Carl H. Ellingson is executive secretary of First Federal.

Fenner & Beane Expands.

Fenner & Beane, one of the country's largest New York Stock Exchange firms, announced yesterday a further expansion of their stock, bond and commodity brokerage facilities through the opening of an office in Newark, N. J. This is the firm's second New Jersey office, the other being in Jersey City.

Cotton Drops To Lower Level

New York, May 31 (AP).—Sharp opening losses in cotton today, reflecting weakness at Liverpool and New Orleans over yesterday's holiday, were partly recovered, but renewed liquidation appeared at the close. October, which had recovered from 7.70 to 7.84, closed at 7.76, with final prices 12 to 21 points net lower.

The market opened 18 to 24 points lower and at the lowest levels since last October under foreign selling and liquidation. July was within 3 points of the low for the season and other months at new lows for the lives of the contracts. Nevertheless, on trade buying and commission house demand prices rallied 13 to 14 points from the lows. These levels invited renewed liquidation toward the close.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was easy today, influenced by the action of cotton and lard, as well as lower quotations for crude oil. Active liquidation developed on the decline. The market closed 15 to 18 points lower on sales of 222 contracts. Closing quotations: Bleachable spot nominal, July 7.70, September 7.45, October 7.32, December 7.30, January 7.31.

Business Ebbs In 5th District

Richmond, Va., May 31 (AP).—A general decline in business during the first five months of 1938 was reported today by the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank in its monthly review of financial and business conditions in the fifth district.

Cotton textiles, coal production, construction and automobile registrations were among the items which the bank reported showed a decline during April and May. On the other hand unemployment "apparently increased materially in April, especially in textile regions of the district," and commercial failures were more numerous and liabilities greater in the district in April than during the same month of 1937.

The bank report said the district, embracing Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North and South Carolina, showed some seasonal rise in trade during April "due chiefly to the occurrence of Easter in that month, but industry in general declined" below that of the previous month.

Brisk Rebound Offsets Early Wheat Slump

Corn, Rye, Oats and Lard Also Hit New Lows for Season.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 31.—In a sharp rebound, the Chicago wheat market today virtually overcame 1⅝ cents tumble to fresh five-year bottom price records.

Temporary collapse of wheat values, forcing corn, rye, oats and lard quotations all down to levels unmatched heretofore this season, followed an authoritative trade forecast that the 1938 United States wheat crop would be the largest ever known, 1,055,000,000 bushels. The previous record crop was 1,009,000,000 bushels, harvested in 1915.

On the other hand, lively export buying from North America today, about 1,000,000 bushels, helped to rally the Chicago market, and so too did the fact that May delivery at Winnipeg showed 10 cents bulge in the last 48 hours of trading.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to ½ cent lower compared with Saturday's finish, July 68⅞@69, September 70@70⅛; corn ⅛@⅜ down, July 54⅜@54½, September 55½@55⅝; oats unchanged to ¼ off; rye varying from 1⅛ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions showing 5 to 12 cents setback.

July Rubber Quotas Slashed to 45%

London, May 31 (AP).—The international rubber regulation committees today cut export quotas of producers for July, August and September to 45 per cent of the basic allowed shipment figures from 60 per cent. The reduction was aimed to reduce unsold supplies, which have been weighing upon the market since demand from the United States slumped sharply last year. The fall in American consumption of rubber was held partly responsible for the action to curtail the supply on the world market.

Futures Advance.

New York, May 31.—Rubber futures in the New York market rallied .36 to .42 of a cent a pound following news of the export quota cut, which was greater than most traders expected.

United Shipyards Sale To Be Completed

New York, May 31 (AP).—An attempt to block the sale of substantially all assets of the United Shipyards, exclusive of cash and accounts receivable, to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation failed today in Federal Court.

...arkets.

...Associated Press.

Lond... May 31.—Publication of unfavorable business reports caused stock prices to sell off in today's market and the general tone was heavy at the close. Gold mining shares reacted and trading in that group slackened. Rubber issues advanced sharply following the announcement of a reduction in the rubber export quota, while British funds and transatlantic securities held steady. Foreign bonds were erractic and movements in the industrial section were irregular.

Paris—The bourse closed with a heavy tone and industrials and international shares moved irrigularly. Rentes were off 10 to 10 higher and Bank of France issue lost 85 francs. Sues Canal declined 320 francs, while Royal Dutch was down about 40.

Liverpool—Wheat futures were firm most of the day and at one time were up more than 3 pence, but reacted partially when Chicago prices sold off. Final prices were 1¼d to 2¼d net higher. Reports of Italy buying Australian and American grain was a factor. Following Monday's sharp break in cotton futures, the market assumed a waiting attitude and buying was restricted. When the New York market failed to decline to a parity, prices steadied and closed 3 to 5 net higher.

The Market

Stocks Resume Decline in Dull Trading; Government Bonds Firm.

New York, May 31.—Commodity prices were mixed and Government bonds were firmer, but stocks resumed their decline. Dollars worked lower on the better feeling toward peace in Europe and the growing doubts arising over our business prospects. Stocks were forced down to the levels prevailing two months ago before they stood their ground. Sales volume was the smallest in a week, with less than 500,000 shares handled. July wheat closed unchanged at 69 cents a bushel.

A good deal of selling took place in Chrysler, which lacked its one-time resistance effort, and 2 points were cliped from the price. Copper shares were especially soft, although the large consumption figures for Europe reported over the week-end brought a slight stiffening in the foreign price for the metal. American Smelting, Anaconda and Kennecott gave up more than a point each and fell to the year's worst level, or thereabouts. U. S. Smelting was an exception to the general weakness, as also was Dome Mines. Both rose a point.

Steel and Bethlehem led their groups into lower grounds on the poor outlook for operations immediately ahead. Farm and mail order shares suffered rather wide losses on the uninterrupted decline in commodity prices. Chemicals dropped 1 to 3 points. Standard Oil and Texas declined a point, but other oil shares were steady. Utility and rail issues ruled lower, but they were not particularly assailed. Leading airplane stocks gave up a point. Some of the active stocks recovered a little in the last hour.

Three Per Cent Lower.

At today's low prices the industrial stock average price, based on The Sun's compilation, was down about 3 per cent on the month. Prices reached their highest point since March 31 (the year's low) on May 10, when they were 8 per cent above April's closing prices. A steady decline then set in, which brought stocks back to the levels of the first week in April. Prices are now about 12 per cent above the year's low and 37 per cent under the levels of a pear ago. Railroad stocks fell 3 per cent this month. They were at their best on May 11, when they showed a gain of 16 per cent over the closing of April. Railroad shares are now about 11 per cent above the worst of the year and are down 66 per cent from the closing prices of May 1937.

Business Falls.

Congress apparently is going to get the spending program finished in a hurry, so that the Congressmen who vote for the huge outlay can go home and tell their constituents how disloyal it would be to bite the hand that feeds them at the November elections. Business probably is thankful for the help it is offered in the new tax bill that became a law last week, but the show of bad humor by the President over the matter merely adds to prevailing uncertainty over what next to expect from the Administration.

Meanwhile business is still falling. This week's operating rate of the steel industry will drop to 26.1 per cent of capacity, according to the estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute. Last week the rate was 29 per cent and a year ago it was 77.4 per cent. The steel trade hasn't got above 36 per cent this year and it is now back virtually to the low of 25.6 per cent reached in the year-end shutdowns. There is no profit for the steel maker at that rate, nor is there any profit in many steel consuming industries when orders are so slack.

Deflation.

The continued let... volume of stock ... number of ... continu... ...ct switch... ...eaving the field ... location open for ... the brokerage concerns. ...house will close its office in a certain section where another is operating and in return the other firm will act accordingly some place else. This system helps the situation somewhat, but in any number of out-of-town cities there is not enough business for even one brokerage house to operate on a profitable basis.

Horning In.

Permission for unlisted trading, given by SEC, in a number of issues listed on the stock exchange to two out-of-town security markets has led to a report that these exchanges have been doing their best to cut the business now being done on the exchange floor. This report is disregarded by both member firms and exchange officials. The denial is well backed up by the statistics of the SEC on April trading. Of the total value of all sales on registered exchanges in that month the stock and curb exchanges accounted for 95.8 per cent of the business. Neither the Chicago nor the Boston exchange during the whole of last month were able to exceed a total of 20,000 shares in any single day, which is just another proof of the relative unimportance of these trading marts.

Steel Operations Fall to 26.1%

New York, May 31 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 2.9 points to 26.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 29 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 30.7 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 77.4 per cent.

Utilities Lead Curb Declines

New York, May 31 (AP).—The curb market was generally lower today, with some specialities and utilities down a point or more. Sherwin-Williams was off 1½ at 70, American Gas & Electric lost 1⅛ at 23¾, Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea dropped a point at 39, Tampa Electric declined 2¼ to 29¼ and Newmont Mining slid back 2⅜ to 47⅛.

The selling trend was felt throughout the list. Fractional losers included Aluminum Co. at 71½, American Cyanamid "B" 15¾, Pantepec Oil 4¾, Pittsburgh Plate Glass 65.

Big Bank Sees Credit Lifted To 100 Billion

Guaranty Trust Analyzes Extent of Potential Inflation.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 31.—The Guaranty Survey, monthly review of Guaranty Trust Co., out today, reported the existence of a potential credit expansion "well in excess of $100,000,000,000 in all." It said:

"Even the most casual glance at the present banking situation leaves no room for doubt regarding the potentially inflationary character of the recent action of the United States Treasury and the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System in releasing inactive gold and reducing member bank reserve requirements.

"Just before the action was taken excess reserves of member banks were estimated at $1,730,000,000. They are now estimated at $2,630,000,000, showing an increase of $900,000,000. Moreover, as a result of the release of inactive gold, Treasury deposits with the Federal Reserve banks now stand at $1,183,000,000, which is about $1,000,000,000 above the level at which they are usually maintained.

"As these funds are spent, they will flow into business channels and will swell both the reserves and the deposits of the country's banks. Already bank deposits amount to approximately $52,000,000,000 as against $55,000,000,000 in 1929.

"It is a curious but significant thing that the potentially inflationary character of these measures may, for the time being, actually tend to prevent the credit expansion and general business revival that they were intended to promote. The plan has injected a further element of uncertainty into the business outlook and has made many business men less inclined than ever to undertake new commitments."

National Sugar Halves Dividend

New York, May 31 (AP).—Directors of National Sugar Refining Co. today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on captial stock, payable July 1 to holders of record June 7. The company has paid 50 cents quarterly on the capital stock since April 1, 1929.

Atlantic Refining, No. 1.

Philadelphia, May 31 (AP).—Directors of the Atlantic Refining Co. today declared a dividend of $1 per share on the cumulative preferred stock convertible 4 per cent series A of the company, payable August 1, 1938, to stockholders of record at the close of business July 5, 1938.

Legal Notices

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT THE undersigned, being all of the members of a Limited Partnership formed pursuant to the laws of the State of New York, and desiring to do business in the District of Columbia as a Limited Partnership, have filed a certificate of Limited Partnership in the office of the Clerk of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; that the firm name of said partnership is G. M.-P. Murphy & Company; that the business intended to be transacted by said partnership is (a) buying or otherwise acquiring, selling or otherwise disposing of, and in any manner dealing, whether on behalf of the partnership or for others, in stocks, bonds or other securities and property, (b) transacting a general securities and brokerage business such as is ordinarily conducted by New York Stock Exchange firms and conforming to the constitution and rules of the said New York Stock Exchange; (c) underwriting or subscribing to, or assisting to procure underwritings or subscriptions for, stocks, bonds or other securities and/or otherwise financing or assisting to procure the financing of corporate or other enterprises; that Grayson M.-P. Murphy ceased to be a member of said partnership on October 18, 1937, the date of his death, and Gerald C. Maxwell ceased to be a member of said partnership on April 30, 1938; that Otis A. Glazebrook, Jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Vilis, John G. Pennypacker, William P. T. Preston, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, J. Sawyer Wilson, Jr., Charles H. Baetjer, Don M. Kelley, George A. Garrett and John E. Parker are general partners; that P. Eraklin Wood, Frederick Osborn, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., and Walter Russell Herrick are special partners; that the special partners have contributed as capital to the common stock of the co-partnership the following amounts in cash: P. Eraklin Wood, $300,000; Frederick Osborn, $12,500; Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., $50,000, and Walter Russell Herrick, $200,000; and Frederick Osborn has also contributed as capital to said common stock cash, securities and/or other property having actual and agreed values aggregating $62,500; and that the term of the partnership is to end at the close of business on June 30, 1939, subject to earlier termination in certain contingencies. The special partners will be entitled to the return of their contributions upon termination of the partnership. In addition, the partnership agreement provides that part or all of the contribution of each special partner may be withdrawn upon his death or retirement from the partnership or on certain other contingencies but that such withdrawal shall not be made unless and until this certificate shall have been cancelled or so amended as to set forth such withdrawal.

Dated this 24th day of May, 1938. (Signed) Otis A. Glazebrook, Jr., Edward O. McDonnell, Alfonso P. Vilis, John G. Pennypacker, William P. T. Preston, James D. Sawyer, Charles S. Sargent, J. Sawyer Wilson, Jr., Charles H. Baetjer, Don M. Kelley, George A. Garrett and John E. Parker, general partners; P. Erskine Wood, Frederick Osborn, Grayson M.-P. Murphy, Jr., and Walter Russell Herrick, special partners.

TUESDAY, JUNE 7, 1938—

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE TWO-STORY FRAME DWELLING KNOWN AS PREMISES 3933 VAN NESS STREET, NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust duly recorded, in Liber No. 6815, Folio 501 et seq., of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will sell, at public auction, in front of the premises, on TUESDAY, THE SEVENTH DAY OF JUNE, A. D. 1938, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia, and designated as and being part of a tract of land called "Friendship," known as "Grasslands," and being lot 4 according to plat attached to Partition Deed between Benjamin F. Riley and Aquila Eld, recorded in Liber R. M. H. 17, folio 62, of the land records of the District of Columbia, said lot being described in said partition deed by metes and bounds as follows: Beginning for the same at the Northwest corner of lot 3 of said partition Deed, and running thence South 72½ degrees West, 6¾ perches; thence South 21½ degrees East, 14 8-10 perches to the County Road known as Isaac Pierce's Road or Loughborough Lane Road; thence North 87½ degrees East, by and with said County Road, 6.95 perches to an angle in said road in the center of a ditch; thence North 10 degrees West, 6 perches to lot 2 of the aforesaid Deed of Partition; thence South 72½ degrees West, 1¾ perches to the Southwest corner of the aforesaid lot 2; thence North 21½ degrees West by and with the rear or Western line of lots 2 and 3 of the aforesaid Deed, 10 8-10 perches to the point of beginning, excepting so much of said land as was condemned and taken by proceedings in District Court Case No. 1947 in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, for the opening of Van Ness Street. Subject to the sewer privilege granted by Margaret P. Brooke to the District of Columbia, by deed recorded in Liber 3115, folio 263, of the said Land Records. At the date hereof the above described land is designated on the Books of the Assessor of the District of Columbia for taxation purposes as Parcel 34/90. Subject to the right of redemption by the makers of the aforesaid deed of trust their heirs and assigns within a period of sixty days from date of sale not excluding Sundays and holidays, as provided in said deed of trust. Subject to any and all liens created by conditional bills of sale for heating and other equipment, if any, and overdue water rentals. All other taxes and assessments to be adjusted to date of transfer of title.

TERMS OF SALE: (One-third of the purchase-money to be paid in cash, balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years, with interest at five per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, from day of sale, secured by first deed of trust upon the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. A deposit of $500.00 will be required at time of sale. All conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps, etc., at cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within ten days from expiration of redemption period, otherwise the trustees reserve the right to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

Bob Burns Says—

I guess it's only human for all of us to be jest a little bit conceited. Here I thought everybody in the world knew that I wanted a girl but the other day a fella came to see me and was tryin' to console me because it wasn't a boy.

He said the reason he was so proud that he had a son was because if it wasn't for his son, his family name would die out. I says, "By the way, what is your family name?" and he said "Smith."

AND THEN FIND THAT FARMHOUSE AND GET A CAR — I'M GOING BACK TO THE WRECK! —WATCH FOR ME ALONG THE ROAD!
AND LEAVE $100,000 WORTH OF PEARLS IN THAT TRICK DETECTIVE'S COAT? NOT ME!! GET GOIN'!!
—BUT SUPPOSE THE OLD GUY HAS COME TO AND SPILLED HIS STORY TO THAT OTHER COP?
THEN I'LL TAKE CARE OF THE COP!
W-WHERE AM I?
G-GOSH, UNCLE PHIL! I-I WAS AFRAID YOU'D NEVER TALK AGAIN!

DIXIE DUGAN — One Condition — J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

I HOPE UNCLE BEVVY SWAYS YOUR PA!
SO DO I — I DON'T SEE WHY PA SHOULD THINK THE WEST IS TOO WILD FOR US TO BE THERE ALONE!
PSST — HERE THEY COME NOW AND PA IS SMILING.
WE'VE TALKED THIS THING OVER AND THE ANSWER IS YES — YOU CAN GO — HURRAH!!
—ON ONE CONDITION—
—THAT WE GO, TOO!

JOE PALOOKA — Road Work — By Ham Fisher

DOGGONE! AH TELL YO HE GOTTA DO HIS ROAD WORK!
HE IS NOT TO BE ALLOWED OFF THE PREMISES. I'LL SEE THE SHEIK THO.
BUT OF COURSE HE MUST DO ROADWORK! SEE THAT HE IS PROPERLY ESCORTED.
THY WISDOM IS AS INFINITE AS THE STARS OH RADIANT ONE.
THE FELLOWS MUST BE CRAZY.
TCH TCH!
I HAVE NEVER SEEN A MAN RUN BEFORE. THEY ARE PROBABLY MAD AS YOU SAY.

JANE ARDEN — Registered U. S. Patent Office. — How I Feel About You— — By Monte Barrett and Russell Ross

CLUB NEWS
I NEVER REALIZED THERE WAS ANY DANGER UNTIL I SAW YOU FIGHTING THOSE MEN OFF AT THE DOOR—
WELL-UH- I COULDN'T LET ANYTHING HAPPEN TO YOU, AFTER ALL, YOU'D DONE—
THAT'S THE WAY I FELT ABOUT YOU FROM THE VERY FIRST!
LET'S NOT GET THAT WAY, HI— IT WOULD SPOIL A GRAND FRIENDSHIP!
NOTHING COULD SPOIL THE WAY I FEEL ABOUT YOU, JANE— AFTER ALL WE'VE BEEN THROUGH TOGETHER—
WE COULDN'T BE ANYTHING BUT GOOD FRIENDS AS QUICKLY AS THIS, COULD WE?

DONALD DUCK— Boys Will Be Boys. — By Walt Disney

WATCH ME! I'LL SHOW YA!
